Veterans Get 600 Quonset Huts For Homes

The housing problem ended today for more than 600 happy veterans of World War II who bought quonset huts at the War Assets Administration's huge sale now in progress at Port Hueneme, Calif.

Announcement that three-fourths of the SII metal-topped huts, formerly occupied by Seabees at the big Naval base, had been sold on the first day to veterans only was made by Serge F. Ballif, Jr., WAA regional director.

Ballif said also that the $12.000,000 "department store" sale it there of goods ranging from or department store' sale there of goods ranging from tents and cots to landing mats, boilers, generators and bakery equipment would continue all week for veterans exclusively, but would be thrown open next Monday and Tuesday to small businesses certified by RFC; to State and local governments, educational and charitable institutions the rest of the week, and to the general public on Monday, July 29.

and B-6 were ahead by five months.

The language survey, showing the pupils' knowledge of capitalization, punctuation, words and sentences and parts of speech was taken only in the elementary grades and eighth grade of junior high schools. The junior high grade was seven months under the national standard, grades B-5 and 6 each a month ahead of the norm and B-4 was three months behind.

In the vocabulary tests, all the grades except two in the elementary schools ranged from two to six months behind the rest of the nation.

In the elementary schools, B-6 two months, and B-4 was average. Approximately the same lag was reported in all grades for arithmetic reasoning.

SPEILING BAD—

Spelling tests were conducted only in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, for some unexplained reason. They showed that the fourth grade was five months behind the national norm, the fifth grade, three months.

Reading tests showed grade. All in senior high schools was ONE YEAR behind the national average; B-8 was five months behind and B-7 was two months behind and B-7 was two months behind and B-8 was two months behind and B-8 was two months back. Junior high schools were even with the national average; B-8 was five months behind and B-8 was two months back and B-8 were ahead by five months.
