Scarcity Shown In Fat Salvage Collection Here

The scarcity of meat in this area the past several weeks is clearly reflected in the fat salvage collection report for the month of September released by A. G. Hemming, chairman of the USDA County Agricultural Conservation Association in Los Angeles.

With the recent removal of meat price controls, meat is expected to be available in larger quantities, which will afford housewives the opportunity to save used kitchen fats so vitally needed for soap and other essential household products.

Hemming pointed out that soap fats are in very short supply and it will take the cooperation of every American housewife to continue to salvage fat or soap supplies which get even shorter they are now.

Torrance and Lomita housewives turned in 1486 pounds for the month of September, compared with 2076 for August.

Candidate, Spare Utility Poles, Committee Urges

With county and state general election campaigns swinging into their final weeks, representatives of Southern California utility companies have opened a campaign of their own to prevent posting of political advertising placards on utility poles.

Placards on poles, according to the joint pole committee, representing the utilities, are a hazard to the safety of the linemen who climb the poles.

Nails and other materials covered by the placards, and the nails or staples used in fastening placards to the poles, have been a direct cause of serious accidents to linemen.

Twenty-eight Southern California utility companies—electric companies, both privately and municipally owned; railroads, telephone and telegraph companies—are represented by the joint pole committee which is seeking the cooperation of political candidates to eliminate the menace of putting placards on the poles.

The joint pole committee, in urging candidates to avoid the use of poles for their placards, points out that it is a misdemeanor under state laws and local ordinances to use utility poles for this purpose.
