to four ounces for retail sale. They are on drug stores and nursery 'supply shelves quite generally.

One teaspoonful of nicotine sulphate, or Black Leaf 40, to a gallon of water (1-800) plus a little soap or one of the detergents (soapless soaps) will make a spray that will kill most aphids. Some of the very large kinds, particularly when they are fully mature, may need a 1-800—use one and one-half teaspoonfuls to a gallon.

There are other materials which are not as effective as micotine sulphate, but which if used when the aphids are small will do a good job. Probably the best substitutes are rotenone on pyrethrum. DDT will kill some aphids, but it also will kill the insects that eat aphids. Therefore, when the aphids come back for a second attack the field is wide open and treally go to town. For this reason. DDT is not satisfactory.

All these materials are effective in dust form. Therefore, if you can find the dusts and have a good duster, they're o.k.

The secret of control is not satisfactory and the dust are sucking, in sects, the spray or dust has to apply it throughly. Because aphids are sucking, insects, the spray or tust has to apply it throughly the material. It is particularly important to kill the wisten, mothers" and are flying, in large numbers and. You may have to spray one a week because a new crop will come right in and, take

Last Units Of State Guard Inactivated

The last remaining units of California's wartime State Guard were mustered out of the state service on May 31, Brig. General Curtis D. O'Sullivan, adjutant general of California, announced.

Final units mustered out were the 1st and 7th battalions, 29th regiment, and the 1st battalion, 39th regiment, all of them organized in Los Angeles.

Disbandment of the State Guard marks the end of five and a half years service by thousands of Californians who wore the uniform of the state's wartime military force. At its peak strength in 1942 the California State Guard totaled 16,000 officers and men.

State Guard totaled 16,000 offi-cers and men.

The State Guard was officially organized on January 2, 1941, after the first units of the California National Guard were called to active federal duty. The California National Guard after combat in both the Pacific and European theaters was returned to state control last year and has now activated nearly 200 units in communities throughout the state.

he state.

Units of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Regiment, were mustered ut March 31. Company H, Torance, then commanded by Maj. L. L. Lewellen, assistant executive officer of the 75th Combangineers, California National luard, was mustered out at that ime.
