MR. AND MRS. W. A. SOWERBY

Couple Renew Nuptial Vows at Golden Wedding Party

An improvised altar with tall white pillars on either side flanked by baskets of golden-hued chrysanthemums and greenery was used at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Pratt, 1808 W. 290th street Sunday afternoon for the golden wedding anniversary reception given in honor of Mrs. Pratt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sowerby of 1817 W. 253rd street.

Approximately 150 guests arrived from far and near to honor the happy couple who were celebrating fifty years of married life together.

Taking their places at the altar Mr. and Mrs. Sowerby renewed their wedding vows with Elder A. E. Barnes of the Los Angeles Adventist church Conference officiating.

Mrs. Enid Thorsen sang three soprano solos accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Pratt. Miss Shirley Artis played violin selections accompanied by Miss Gladys Ashcraft.

A large three-tiered cake was cut and served by the hostess during the afternoon and early evening hours. Accompanying this were assorted sandwiches, cake and Hawaiian punch. Assisting Mrs. Pratt were Mrs. Sadie Lindeman, Mrs. Eleanor Lindeman and Mrs. Ruth Hallstrom.

Mr. and Mrs. Sowerby were the recipients of many lovely gifts including a purse of money from the employees at the Torrance plant of the Coas Insulating Company where Mr. Sowerby is employed.

The couple was married fifty years ago at Marlborough, Mass. and after residing in several towns of New England they left that section of the country 17 years ago to move westward and located at their present property on 253rd street. During the years they have acquired a host of friends, many of whom came to the reception to wish them many more years of happiness together.

Sick Children Should Not Go to School

When your child says "I don't feel good," or when he has a temperature or a fresh cold he should be kept home and in bed, according to Vivian Markham, Torrance school nurse. If a child is willing to stay in bed all day he probably is really sick and not just finding an excuse to stay away from school.

"Our school nurse is a very important part of our educational program," explains Principal William H. Clinkenbeard. "Her job is that of helping teachers with pupil health problems."

The health and safety of boys and girls is of paramount importance. The school nurse spends valuable time taking home pupils who have been allowed to come to school with colds. This cuts down the time that she can devote to the school health program. Parents can be of help in this matter by taking care to send children to school only when they are in good health.

"Dr. K. V. Markham, school physician, points out: "Most contagious diseases begin with a cold and are often spread from one child to another before anyone can tell what disease the original carrier has. The best time to treat a cold is when it first begins. Colds lower resistance; a child in school with a cold is more apt to contract more disease, due to his lowered resistance."
