

These Poets No It!

Poetic Justice Turns Out to be Amusin'---If Not Confusin'

Poetic justice, many times confusing, turned out today to be amusing, when poetry and justice were combined in rhyme and verse, to excuse from jury duty, a 94-year-old cutesy who complained that her nerves would be bothered if she serves.

Poetry crossed swords, in the Hall of Records, The aged woman, of 439 South Serrano avenue, wrote Vernon W. Janney, Superior Court Jury Commissioner, about her summons to jury duty:

"Mrs. Susan Henning is old and lame;
Walking only with a cane;
Her powers of thought are on the blink;
She lets her lawyer do her think;
He'll tell the court I cannot serve,
'Cause sickness gets me with my nerves."
Janney, whose talents have hitherto been confined to selection of jurors, selected a few words in reply:
"Your kind and clever letter
Created a furor
And I think you'd have made
A wonderful juror;
But excused you are from the jury service,
I sure don't wish to make you nervous."
What's the moral to each poem? Write Janney your troubles and stay at home. The county doesn't want citizens "Nervous in jury service."

Chamber Extends Welcome to New Members

Three new members of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce were welcomed by the board of directors Tuesday. They were: N. H. Anderson of Plastik Co. of America, 2740 Cabrillo avenue; Frank Celinscak and Luis M. Lioch of Frank & Luis' Boots, 18830 Hawthorne boulevard, and H. C. Barrington of Barrington Welding Works.
Congratulatory messages for the recently issued folders distributed by the Chamber were read at the directors' meeting. The folder, featuring Torrance as a "balanced city" have been much in demand, according to Mrs. Bertha Heiberg, assistant secretary, who is acting as executive secretary during the vacation of Blaine Walker, executive secretary of the chamber.

SUNSET CRATER

Sunset Crater National Monument is reported to be a cone-shaped crater of volcanic cinder located near Flagstaff in Arizona. Gray at the base and tapering to a red tip, the cone reflects the rays of the sun with gorgeous effect.

HOSPITAL POLIO WARDS CONVERTED

County Harbor General Hospital has completed converting its infantile paralysis wards for other uses, hospital officials announced this week.

The few remaining patients who occupied polio wards have been transferred to other Los Angeles hospitals. The five students and graduates from the Sister Kenny Institute in Minneapolis also have been transferred it was stated.

The County Harbor General Hospital became the local headquarters in the fight against polio during the epidemic of last summer.

Dr. Wm. M. Johnson Heads Occidental Alumni Round-up

Announcement was made this week that Dr. William M. Johnson, 1121 West Carson street, has been appointed chairman of the Occidental College 48th Alumni Day Round-up to be held on the campus June 11.
Robert L. Shafer, director of the alumni activities, said some of the features of the day will include a 48er fashion show, a barbecue dinner, a motion picture sports roundup of the year, a square dance, a variety show

Navy Seeks More Week-End Flyers

The Navy is seeking more volunteers "week-end warriors" for its Naval Reserve aviation program.
Naval Reservists who participate in the program in cities and towns throughout the country usually receive group instruction and flight training during off-work hours on week-ends.
All aviation personnel in the Naval Reserve, and other reservists whose postwar experience or training qualifies them for assignment to aviation activities, are eligible to participate.
The program has no set personnel quotas. A few reservists can establish a Volunteer Aviation Unit (VAU) within any of the nine continental Naval Districts by applying to the District Commandant. Each unit directs and encourages maintenance, and development of aviation skills, and training of its members through group instruction, lectures, films, and self-study.
At present, 102 VAUs are established. Their membership includes 3,000 officers and approximately 8,000 enlisted personnel. The members of the volunteer units receive no compensation.
From the basic VAU, Volunteer Aviation Units that have available airfields, and show potential strength and interest, can be upgraded to qualify for actual flight training, either at Naval Air Reserve stations or local airfields where arrangements are made to fly-in Navy planes for week-end use.
