PRINTERS 'MUM' ON THEIR SIDE OF STORY

When the publishers of the Dominguez Area Bulletin offered free space in their newspaper this week to the San Pedro Typographical Union to give "their side of the story" regarding the dispute between the Torrance Herald and members of the printers union, the offer was ignored.

The Dominguez Area Bulletin is published by the Dominguez Bulletin Company in which James C. Nixon, Jr., and his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Nixon, hold the majority interest. The newspaper is printed at the Torrance Herald plant and has been subjected to attack by the San Pedro printers union.

An identical offer to give their side of the story was made to the publishers of the Torrance Herald. Equal prominence and amount of space was promised to both parties to the trade dispute. In fact, when no reply was received from the printers union, the space was left blank in this week's issue of the Bulletin. The reply from the Torrance Herald, summarizing developments in the dispute, now approaching its sixth month, follows:

Four regular employees and one part-time employee, all members of the San Pedro Typographical Union No. 862, and one apprentice printer walked off their jobs on February 11, after serving notice that they were "not available for work"—and under their own interpretation of union rules they could remain "unavailable for 90 days."

There remained on the mechanical staff only the foreman, a union man of long standing.

The six printers, having thus quit their jobs, the publishers were forced to hire other printers to fill the vacancies the regular crew members had created.

Three days later, the former employees, (apparently on advice from International Union officials) reported for work. They were admitted to the composing room and shown that other printers had been hired to man the positions they had quit. In selecting the new crew members the publishers asked no questions of applicants regarding their union affiliations and no discrimination against union membership has since been made, nor will there be any such discrimination in the future. THE TORRANCE HERALD IS NOT FIGHTING ORGANIZED LABOR!

The walk-out of the six printers followed six weeks of discussion over working hours, and the printers' refusal of the following offer:

"1. Four (4) regular shifts of 7½ hours each, Monday through Thursday, and five hours overtime, at time and one-half, distributed over the four regular shifts and worked immediately following the 7½ hours of straight time,—an average of less than 9 hours a day for four days a week.

2. Printers were to have Friday, Saturday, and Sunday off each week.

3. Pay offered for the four days of work, as above, was identical with that received by union printers on daily newspapers working five full shifts, or $84.87 for days and $89.14 for nights.

4. One printer on each day and night shift was to receive $1.00 additional per shift as machinist-operator."

Since this offer, the Torrance Herald has advanced the scale of wages to conform to the new union rates in this area. The management is now paying from $87.50 to $101.50 for a three day week of 32½ hours. (The new employees preferred a 3-day week of 32½ hours instead of a 4-day week of 35 hours, for the same weekly take-home pay.) They thus enjoy Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday off each week.

contractual agreement to abide by any such rules and which it had no part in writing.

But in spite of these concessions by the management, the printers walked off the job. Two weeks later, Jack Whiting, International Typographical Union official admitted in the presence of both the Local union president and the Herald publishers that the union members had "made a regrettable mistake."

The only alternative the management had was to suspend publication or hire other printers to replace those who quit. It did the latter. And this is the reason there is no justification for calling the dispute a "lockout."

The Torrance Herald has NEVER REFUSED to meet with representatives of the striking printers and attempt to negotiate a settlement. In fact, another conference is scheduled for July 27 between representatives and Grover C. Whyte, publisher of the Torrance Herald. If irresponsible members of the union are not aware of developments, it certainly is not the fault of the Torrance Herald. The Herald does think, however, that the printers should get the FACTS and not broadcast unreliable information.

This is no quarrel with organized labor. The Torrance Herald has employed union workers for over 25 years, and is a firm supporter of the rights of working men and women. And it obviously believes in paying fair wages.

The Torrance Herald believes that $87.50 to $101.50 for three days of work is good pay, and no difficulty has been experienced in replacing the men who quit with competent printers.

Likewise, all other departments of the publishing plant are running in a satisfactory manner, and apparently the employees are enjoying their fine new modern home, equipped with good light and ventilation, shower baths, ice-cold running drinking water, and other modern conveniences.

Open House of Hospital's New Wing Draws 300

An estimated 300 visitors attended the "open house" at the Torrance Memorial Hospital last Friday to inspect the hospital's new 23-bed wing and to view other facilities of the modern Class A institution, according to Miss Elsa Hammerstrom, superintendent.

Guests from as far away as Garden Grove, Los Angeles, Long Beach, and other Southern centers were attracted. Attending were superintendents and other executives of other hospitals as well as a number of former patients.

Reflecting the need for the new wing, Superintendent Hammerstrom reports that already the beds in one of the new wards are all occupied.
