Peggy Lou Hugg Becomes Mrs. John Robert Garner During Idaho Ceremony

News of interest to Torrance residents is the wedding Jan. 19 of S/Sgt. John Robert Garner and Margaret Louise (Peggy Lou) Hugg in First Christian Church of Boise, Idaho.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Michael Hugg of Boise, chose 4 p.m. for her nuptials. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Garner of 803 Amapola avenue, is stationed in La Mesa where he is an Air Force recruit sergeant.

Imported French lace trimmed the bridal gown of white satin, which was complimented by a veil of nylon tulle. Miss Hugg carried a muff of roses from the Garner garden, flown to Boise for the occasion, centered with a white orchid.

Yellow and white formed the color motif of gowns and flowers for the bridal party. Glenda Hugg, the bride's sister, was maid of honor in white taffeta with gold sequins. Gowns of the bridesmaids, Katherine Bridges and Donna Freeman, and of the flower girls, Frances Hugg and Janet Russell, sister and cousin of the bride, were yellow with silver sequins. The bridesmaids and maid of honor carried white carnations and daffodils.

Sgt. Bill Garner of the Air Force was his brother's best man. Guests were seated by Pfc. John McCafferty and Pfc. Ralph Babcock. Rev. Hartzell Cobbs was officiant, Katherine Rayne was soloist and Jane Rayne lit tapers in the church. The bride's parents hosted the reception in their home. Honey-moon of the newlyweds took them from Boise to Torrance, and they will make their home in El Cajon.

EL CAMINO NOW MUTUAL AGENCY

Students and adults alike are being given a chance to enjoy theatrical productions in the Los Angeles area through the efforts of the cultural relations department of El Camino Jr. College.

Headed by Robert Englehart, the department offers students lower rates for plays in Los Angeles and Pasadena, as well as providing a Mutual Ticket Agency for the Torrance area.

Persons wishing to attend presentations at the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Biltmore Theater, Pasadena Playhouse or other theaters may now obtain tickets from the agency in the El Camino student bookstore.

DON FINDLEY NIXES IDEAS OF ROMANCE

By MARJIE MEYERS

Eluding eager females for three quarters of a century is a feat that one Torrance notable is proud of, especially now that another Leap Year has rolled around.

Donald Findley, president and incorporator of Remco, the successor to the Dominguez Land Co., is not a woman hater. Yet he will reach the age of 76 next month without having been trapped by a femme fatale.

Findley lives in a cozy apartment at 2511 Eldorado St., an apartment filled with mementos of a busy and happy bachelor life. This reporter was the third woman ever admitted through its sacred portals.

Born in Butler County, Pa., Findley says he was "too much of an adventurer to be tied down." His life has crossed those of hundreds of notables, and his "adventures" have led him into politics, law, mining and real estate.

Penn State College was the first alma mater of the husky lad. After two years there, he went to New York and got his first real job as secretary to the Southern Railway Co. president.

Banker Levi P. Morton, vice president under Harrison in 1888, was Findley's next boss. He worked for him during the day and occupied his evenings with courses at New York Law School.

It was during this period that love first entered Don Findley's life. A cousin attending the very fashionable Miss Brown's School for Girls on Fifth Ave. was determined to make a match for him.

She picked two of her school-mates as likely prospects. Edna Woolworth, heiress to the fabulous dime store millions ("I might have been Barbara Hutton's father," Findley comments wryly), and Irma Cody, daughter of the famed William S. of Wyoming.

These loves the young man spurned because "there was too much money involved." Irma, he says, was a beautiful blonde, but he wasn't swayed. His interest centered on another of Miss Brown's students, a girl whose name he refuses to divulge.

Romance blossomed with this nameless beauty. Findley courted her, was accepted into her family, but wouldn't pop the all important question.

"She had too much money too," he laments. "I had to make my stake first so she wouldn't be supporting me." After graduating from law school Don went with the Root, Clarke and Stinson law firm, headed by the noted Elihu Root. Teddy Roosevelt's Secretary of State.

One day while lunching with a former classmate, Don encountered a vociferous California promoter who was seeking backers for a gold mine. Findley wasn't interested, but the man later reappeared and offered to send Findley to California for a look at the mine.

This began a new phase in the bachelor's life. He convinced Standard Steel Car Co. of Butler, to finance the mine. After a year of vague reports, the company became worried about the venture and sent Findley west to do some checking.

He remained in California, even after the mine was sold to a London company, and began to gather capital.

The girl in the east remained in Don's life with admirable patience. Each winter she came to California with her mother to visit him, but he remained a swain and not a bridegroom.

1917 came, and World War I. Don, commissioned a captain in the finance division of the or-
