

SLUMBER PARTY HIGHLIGHTS HOLIDAY FOR THE GALS

FIRST THING on the agenda at last night's slumber party, held at the 532 Via Linda Vista home of Barbara Hazard, was a gab session. In the "gossip" circle were Sally Hickman, Lynn Lorenz, Norma Mead, Dale Schumert, Joan Leech, Hazard, Sandy Grub, Patty Sues, Mary Sue Easley, Sue Johnson, Shirley Pagei and Pat Fenton. Not pictured were Berta Long, Pam Dickey and Sandy Sanders.

MIDNIGHT SNACK . . . Teen-agers are well-known for their "hollow-legs," and a slumber party is one of the best occasions to observe their prodigious appetites in action. After snacking on candy, cookies, and crackers half the night, the gals decided around midnight that it was time for something a little more substantial. Accordingly, they made their way to the Hazard refrigerator, well stocked for the anticipated "raid." Sandy Grub, left, discovered the prize of the evening, a huge layer cake, while Patty and Mary Sue found "coke" and milk to slake their thirst. Still searching among the shelves is Shirley.

FAST ASLEEP . . . Long after the clock tolled the hour of midnight, the tired gals finally sprawled out in any available space to get a few hours' rest after the gala evening. Sally and Joan get the far left and right ends, respectively, of a bed, while Hostess Barbara lounges across the center, almost burying Norma, whose only visible feature is a drooping head. Lynn gets her forty winks on the back edge of the bed. The gals woke up this morning with red, sleepy eyes and uncurled hair (except for the few who had the foresight to bring bobby pins or hair curlers along!) but who cared? Today's a holiday, and the fun they had is well worth the lost sleep—for what teen-ager doesn't love a slumber party?

Walteria Girl Scouts Fete First Birthday

Walteria Girl Scout Troop No. 338, sponsored by Walteria PTA, celebrated its first birthday last Wednesday with a spaghetti dinner, court of awards, and gift exchange held at the kindergarten room of Walteria School.

The girls cooked and served dinner to their mothers, while the mothers presented the girls with two birthday cakes.

Janice Baker received five proficiency badges and a one-year star in the court of awards.

Other awards were made to Mary Burke, four badges; Gloria Busch, three badges; Bonney Goaler, two badges and a one-year star; Beth Harvey, one badge and a one-year star; Sharon Hurley, four badges and a five-year numeral; Lovetta Hyde, four badges; Patricia Kamfonic, two badges and a one-year star; Geron Kettering, two badges and a one-year star; Judith Turner, two badges and Carolyn Welch, three badges.

Carol Gooler, congratulated on becoming a First Class Scout, received five badges and a one-year star.

The evening ended with mothers joining their daughters in the Girl Scout Friendship Circle.

TELEPHONITIS . . . "Get off the phone!" screams Sue, as she holds a threatening pillow aimed in the direction of Sally's head. But Sally is oblivious as she carries on the favorite sport of teenage gals, commonly known to tortured parents who'd like to "make one little girl please" as telephontitis. Lynn, hair all pinned up with a "stocking cap" to keep curls in place, is resigned about the situation, waiting patiently for her turn. Barbara hands a peace offering, Christmas candy, to camera-shy Mary Sue, who is getting a little tired of tied-up telephone lines.
