NURSES
It's dark, only the small lamp above my bed is burning. I'm wide awake. Suddenly a stabbing pain wracks my body. I push my button and in seconds an angel of mercy is at my side. Within minutes her ministrations free my body of that pain and I go to sleep.
Those women follow a doctor's orders to the letter but there are times when they argue to have his order modified or changed to give their patient more rest, less pain, a greater chance to get well more quickly.
The most terrifying time is after midnight when I seem to be lost in a void. A nurse talked to me, about herself, myself, contemporary affairs, anything to get my mind relaxed; rubbed my shoulders, arms, lower limbs and told me, "Now you can sleep" and I did.
The doctor does an excellent job but a Nurse brings her patient out of the fog. It is to them I say, "Well done."

THS Musicians Play in Festival

The Torrance High School band and orchestra, under the direction of John Baum, took part yesterday in the 19th annual California Regional Music Festival at Pomona College.
More than 60 musical groups, mostly school orchestras, are participating in the weekend affair and another group, mostly school bands, will play next weekend.
Each group has been judged "superior" or "excellent" in district festivals held earlier this spring. The bands and orchestras will perform for 30 minutes and will be judged by college and university faculty members.
Festival highlights for next weekend include a concert by the All-Southern California Junior High School Band of 120 members, a parade of more than 50 bands and a massed band performance with some 2000 musicians playing.
