Later Costa went to third on a passed ball and then attempted to steal home but was cut down by a quick throw from Pearson to Schmidt.

In the last of the seventh, Electric pitcher Pearson got as far as third base on a double and a fielder's choice, but died there when Gene Murphy grounded to the pitcher to end the ball game.

What happened to me on this job shouldn't happen to a dog. This old gal got to thinking how she'd been carrying me around in the basket all morning and she got sore. Darned if she didn't put me to work lugging that basket back and forth 'til I was two hours late getting back to the store.

Boy, were we busy when I got back to the store. Mr. Miller and the whole family was there waiting for me. They had brought in all their cameras and wanted them loaded with film, since they were leaving in the morning on their vacation. Boy! they ought to get some good pictures up at the lake.

That reminds me of how many people there are who don't take a camera on their trip. They'll not believe you back home about the size of that fish unless you take a picture of it. Remember folks, cameras are our business and we rent them as well as sell them. Incidentally, has your camera been checked lately? We'll be happy to do so at no charge.

See you next week, SNAPPER
