

HILDA JELLISSON
... To Retire After 43 Years of Teaching

Three Teachers Plan Retirement

A grand total of 107 years of helping children to learn—that is the worthy contribution made by three local teachers who will retire from local schools at the end of this term.

Leading the trio in length of service is Miss Hilda Jellison, principal of the 186th St. School at 1551 W. 186th St. She has been with the Los Angeles City School System since 1911—43 years—and has been principal of the 186th St. School for two years.

She will retire to a life of gardening and enjoying her new Manhattan Beach home when the term ends June 18. Members of the school PTA will honor Miss Jellison with a Teachers' Luncheon at the school tomorrow.

Miss Jellison was one of 15 retiring elementary school principals honored recently by 200 other principals at a banquet of the Elementary School Principals' Association.

The teacher completed her education at the Los Angeles State Normal School in 1909 and her first teaching post was at Simi in Ventura County. She has an adopted daughter and two grandsons.

Elizabeth Jordan, another retiring school principal is Elizabeth Brewster, head of the Normont Elementary School, 1001 W. 223rd St., Harbor City.

Mrs. Jordan has taught for the Los Angeles School System for 34 years. She plans to tour the United States with her husband, a former Army officer, in a house car which has been converted from a school bus.

Albert Vogler, who has instructed students at Narbonne High School in the art of printing. He will end his teaching career this term and will spend about a year pursuing his hobbies, house painting and gardening, before going back to part-time newspaper printing work, he says.

Born in England, Vogler came to the United States at the age of eight. He received his education in Los Angeles print shops, served with the armed forces in World War I.
