Fathers' Group To Investigate School Loads

Organization of a North Torrance Fathers' Club to investigate what some parents term inadequate schools to meet the needs of a growing city was announced at a meeting of the group Friday night.

Some members of the group feel that school authorities have failed to raise and spend enough money for new schools and adequate additions to others.

The North Torrance Fathers' Club was organized, members said, to implement a recent action by the Ferry PTA, which adopted a resolution protesting the return of the fourth grades to double sessions when school officials found that enrollment exceeded expectations.

State Slack
A recent disclosure that California's contribution to education costs has not kept pace with soaring annual income was bitterly attacked by the fathers.

"What is more important to our youngsters and to the future of our country than proper education?" one declared. "There appears to be more money than ever before for every purpose today except the public schools. Millions are needed, not tomorrow, not next year—but now!"

California's Gov. Goodwin Knight said at a Sacramento educators' conference, that California is now short 10,000 classrooms. The fathers pointed to Knight's statement that spending for schools has declined from 3 1/2 per cent to 2 1/2 per cent of overall individual annual income over a 17-year period, while the state's annual income is now the highest in history—$25,000,000,000.

Sweeping Crisis
In a unanimous resolution for presentation to the PTA, the fathers declared that planning in the "sweeping school crisis" simply was not big enough and that vision, enterprise, broader measures, and even emergency action will be needed to correct it before education of thousands of youngsters on half-day sessions is permanently impaired.

The resolution cited failure of bond issues, insufficient bond issues, delay in spending available funds, and delay in obtaining Federal assistance for the classroom shortage and overcrowded schools.

Action Demanded
Fathers demanded emergency measures to provide full-day sessions for all pupils, declaring that temporary housing would make it possible as it has in some other cities.

A letter from the Torrance school board, stating in part, "we should be thankful for what we have," adopted a negative approach, fathers felt, and failed to show broad-scale planning required.

Fathers said the western migration of people was a good thing and to meet it, "we must raise our sights considerably in planning."

More Needed
"There is no doubt that a great deal has been done," the resolution concluded. "The point is that if twice as much had been done, there would be classrooms adequate for the current enrollment for full-day sessions throughout, instead of half-day sessions and overcrowded classrooms, with no provision for continuing increases."

Beach Students In Local School

Opposition to petitions asking that children in the portion of the El Nido tract recently annexed by Redondo Beach be allowed to attend Redondo schools was expressed by the Redondo School Board Wednesday night.

The children in the area now attend Torrance schools. The area lies east of Inglewood Ave. between 182nd and 190th Sts., and west of the railroad right-of-way. In former county territory, it was recently annexed by Redondo Beach.

Redondo board members expressed doubt that the 134 signatures were "an honest reflection of the people," claiming that the signatures were obtained by an employee of the Torrance Unified School District.

Long Dispute
Local school officials acknowledged that a local school official had spurred the drive to get signatures, after repeated unsuccessful attempts to get Redondo schools to accept jurisdiction over the territory. The petitions, however, were certified and circulated by Mrs. Thomas Griffin, of 2716 W. 182nd Pl.

Cromwell Warner, Jr., Redondo school board member, declared that the petitions were "very flattering" but said the addition of the area would create a heavy burden on Redondo, which is trying to end double sessions.

Torrance schools also are burdened with double sessions, some of them for children in the fourth and fifth grades, while Redondo schools are on double session only through the third grade at some schools.

Shop For Children
"We have an obligation to the people whose children we already have and whose taxes have supported our schools," Warner said. "I don't feel we should go out and shop for children."

Redondo Superintendent Harry P. McCandless said that if the El Nido territory were taken into the Redondo School district, another school would be necessary. Local officials estimated that about 100 children from the tract are now attending El Nido School, with an additional of perhaps 200 more when the tract is completely developed.

Mrs. Griffin said she believed a majority of the people in the area felt that since they live in Redondo Beach, the children should go to school there. A school site is right across the street from many of the homes, she said, and residents feel that if the area becomes a part of the Redondo school district, a new school will be built.

Residents Confused
While she personally was aware of the confused school situation when she bought her home, Mrs. Griffin said many residents did not realize that their children would go to Torrance schools when they moved in.

Meanwhile, there is agitation among some residents in the tract to withdraw from Redondo Beach and annex to Torrance.

The Board of Supervisors will decide school jurisdiction over the area, with a public hearing on the matter set at 10:30 a.m. on Dec. 13. The county superintendent of schools will make a recommendation.

If the board action were that the children should go to Redondo Beach schools, the change would not become effective until September, 1956. Some observers think that supervisors may call an election in the area in question.

Torrance schools also are educating children in the remainder of the El Nido tract, which is still county territory. Some residents of that territory still favor annexation to Torrance.

Thief Takes Mirrors

Ted Jensen, 16328 Wilton pl., reported the theft of two chrome lined mirrors and two bunk beds from the back of his pickup truck, to Police Thursday. He said the theft took place late Wednesday night, according to police reports.

Value of the stolen articles was estimated at $62.

Meeting Called To Study Rabies

Because of the increasing incidence of rabies cases in dogs and in wild life, the California State Chamber of Commerce has called a meeting in San Francisco tomorrow to discuss legislation for the control of rabies in the state.

Dr. Clinton H. Thienes, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Lewis T. Bullock, member of the executive committee of the Medical Research Assn. of California, have been invited to the meeting. Dr. Bullock will represent the California Medical Assn. and Dr. Thienes the Citizen's Committee for Better Health.

Rabies of epidemic proportions in dogs has spread to wild animals in whom the incidence of the disease is now two and one-half times greater than last year, and the highest it has been since 1946.

Diseased wild animals are now infecting cattle in rising numbers and the need for control of the disease is urgent, officials have declared.

Girl Hit By Car Sept. 9 Still Critical

Three-year-old Judy Ann Woolheater, of 19905 Burin Ave., was listed as still critical Friday afternoon by Harbor General Hospital authorities, 36 days after being hit by a car while crossing Halston Ave.

The youngster has been unconscious since the accident, hospital officials said.

She suffered a fractured leg and possible fractured skull when hit by an auto driven by Orvin J. Bee, 27, of 19223 Flavian Ave., on Sept. 12. Bee was not held by Torrance police following the mishap.

700 Attend YMCA Breakfast

Mrs. Ila Mae Ambach, a vivacious lady who says that her hobby is children, Saturday was named Torrance's good neighbor for the year. The award was presented at the YMCA Good Neighbor Breakfast in the Civic Auditorium, which was attended by more than 700 persons.

Mrs. Ambach, who lives with her husband, William, at 2512 Sierra St., is affectionately known as "Grandma" to the 25 children in the immediate neighborhood. They meet her every night as she comes home from work, she says. She has three children, 10 grandchildren, and 16 great grandchildren of her own.

Neighbors Nominated
She was nominated by eight of her neighbors for her unselfish aid to persons in need and to the children of her area. "She is a motherly angel sent to our street to help young mothers like me," Mrs. Phyllis Oswell declared.

Active in the Rebekahs, Royal Neighbors, and the Moose Lodge, where she belongs to the College of Regents, highest order, she has sold cosmetics for the past 18 years. She is among the top 10 salesmen for her company in the nation.

A native of Texas, she helped to organize the first IFA in that state. She came to California 40 years ago, homesteading in the desert near Yucca Valley. She organized the first school and Sunday School in that now-thriving area.

Likes Social Work
"I've always had a desire to be a social worker, but never had time or money to take the schooling," she declared. She babysits with children of the neighborhood when parents go out, entertains the youngsters in her home, and offers advice to younger mothers in the area when they need it.

Other persons nominated for the award were Mrs. Verda Hansen, Mrs. Gordon Hamilton, and Dr. Kurt Shery. Mrs. Ambach was chosen by a YMCA board.

Committee Named
Dr. Rollin R. Smith was general chairman for the breakfast. Bill Evans acted as master of ceremonies, assisted by Gil Derouin and Bernard Lee. Other officials were Rev. John Taylor, publicity; A. C. Turner, food; Bill Speck and Ed Raphael, tickets; C. A. Mewborn, awards; and Joe Arnold, equipment.

The pancake breakfast was served by members of H-Y and Tri-H-Y members at the Torrance 'Y.' Entertainment was furnished by the Torrance Area Youth Band and the Barber Shop Quartet.

Mediation Fails To Halt Gravel Company Strike

Local construction was grinding to a halt over the week end at attempts to halt the gravel industry strike which started Oct. 3 failed Friday. Federal Conciliator Earl J. Ruddy, who had called Friday's sessions, said no other meetings had been scheduled, although the meeting was recessed subject to call.

Locally, the strike has just about halted all major construction. School, civic center, and home construction was just about halted at week end.

Prime issue in the 15-day walkout is a Teamsters Union demand for a pension plan which the union would administer and which would go with an employee from job to job.

On the other side, employers argue that they would be cut off from administering a pension fund for which they paid the bill. One large employer said the plan would cost $600,000 a year.

All local gravel concerns are shut down with the exception of Torrance Sand and Gravel, which is not a member of the employers' association.

Federal Conciliator Ruddy said he would reconvene the negotiations sessions as soon as he felt some progress was possible. He is continuing to meet with both factions separately.

TOMORROW'S COMBAT JET . . . This drawing of a combat jet airplane of the future as visualized by Ervin R. Heald, aerodynamic design specialist for Douglas Aircraft Co., shows the plane of the future will closely resemble today's guided missiles. Heald told a Society of Automotive Engineers meeting in Los Angeles Friday that a jet capable of flying up to six times the speed of sound at altitudes of 100,000 feet is "not too distant."
