Sermon Cites Epistle to Corinthians

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." These words of firm counsel, given by Paul to the Corinthians in his first epistle (16:13) will be the Golden Text of the Sunday Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches.

"Ancient and Modern Neoromany, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject.

Isaiah reveals God's purpose to destroy bondage when he says, "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, . . . I will break the Assyrian in my land. . . . then shall his yoke depart from off their shoulders. This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth; and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations" (14:24-26).

Local Pastor is 'Big Fisherman'

Prominently displayed on the shelves of the Rev. C. Miles Northrup library is a copy of "The Big Fisherman."

Although Lloyd C. Douglas' famous novel was about the Apostle Peter, it could also be used to describe Rev. Northrup, who is also a fisherman—both for marine life and for the souls of men.

The dean of Torrance pastors, Rev. Northrup has served at the First Baptist Church, 2118 W. Carson St., for the past five years. Most of his time is taken up with the affairs of his church and its 1200 members, but in his spare moments, he is an ardent fisherman.

Slaves' Fish He is proud of his fishing exploits, and noted that he, like Biblical characters of old, had helped to feed the members of his congregation with his catches. He took up fishing after he came to Torrance and has caught many limits of albacore and even a 95-pound halibut at one time. He loves ocean fishing.

His fishing exploits for souls have been successful too, as he has seen his congregation grow from 150 members in 1935 to its present 1200 today. Growth of the church has required the addition of an assistant pastor, the Rev. Nathan Bond, who handles youth activities.

Church Grows The church building itself has grown rapidly in the past 20 years too, with the congregation making plans for a $115,000 addition which will include a three-story educational unit and a one-story social and recreational hall. When completed, the complete unit is expected to be worth more than $1,350,000.

During Rev. Northrup's pastorate, the church outgrew its old facilities in a wooden building and added a sanctuary, office, classrooms. The wooden building, which has served the church for more than 30 years, will be moved away to make room for the new wing. The old structure now will be used by the First Mexican Baptist Church, 925 W. 223rd St.

Two Services Held. Two church services, at 9 and 11 a.m., are held each Sunday to accommodate the crowds. Sunday school classes (for about 300 are also on double session.

Throughout his years in the ministry, Rev. Northrup's chief aide has been his wife, he says. They met while both were attending Moody Bible Institute and he attributes much of his success to her.

are held at the church. Rev. Northrup said. All money is raised through voluntary gifts and tithes, which have so far been sufficient to keep the church debt-free. The new building will put the church back in debt, but only temporarily, members hope. Members will do part of the work, under the direction of Bert Scott, general contractor and church member.

Rev. Northrup came to Torrance from Burbank, formerly serving in Visalia, several places in Colorado, and Phoenix, Ariz. A native of Iowa, he attended Moody Bible Institute.

Believes in Whole Bible "I am a fundamentalist in all Bible interpretations," Rev. Northrup declared. "I believe in the whole bible, not a Bible full of holes."

"The answer to delinquency problems and to crime problems is the church and the Bible. People who pray together stay together," Rev. Northrup believes. The church cooperates with evangelical groups in revival meetings and temperance drives.

"We don't believe that we have any corner on religion," he said.

Through his years in the ministry, Rev. Northrup's chief aide has been his wife, he says. They met while both were attending Moody Bible Institute and he attributes much of his success to her.

REYNOLDS KNIGHT

Curious Switch Developing in Attitudes on Business Outlook

A curious switch has been developing recently in the respective attitudes of government and industry on the outlook for business. Ordinarily the politician goes about asserting there isn't a cloud in the sky and claiming credit for having erased same. The businessman will admit that it isn't raining now, but cling to his umbrella.

Just this month, in the midst of many announcements of forward-looking plans for expansion by industry, there have been words of caution sounded loudly by a government spokesman.

Walter Williams, Undersecretary of Commerce, told a Los Angeles audience that the balance of confidence and responsibility must be rigidly maintained to assure continuance of this year's prosperity through 1956. He called on manufacturers to keep inventories in check and expansion within bounds. He urged consumers not to overspend their incomes; if they tried to, he said, lenders and sellers should supply the necessary restraint.

By contrast, businessmen themselves were laying plans for spending $30 billion on plant expansion in 1956. Machine tool orders, another index of confidence, soared to $570 million in the first nine months of 1955. Corporate securities sold to raise new money amounted to $5 billion in the first 10 months. The cautious National Association of Purchasing Agents suggested this was a good time to buy for inventory.

HEAT WHERE NEEDED—The great expansion in use of gas for central heating in homes—it's now nearly two-and-a-half times what it was in 1946—is being matched by a similar upsurge in gas for room-by-room heating.

Robert H. Norris, chairman of the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association's direct heating equipment division, reports that individual room heaters have become standard equipment in millions of additional homes since 1950. That year the census showed 20,118,000 homes using such equipment, with about 30 per cent of them operating on gas. The increasing availability, in these last five years, of natural gas and liquefied petroleum (bottled gas—in both city and rural areas)—has so spurred this market that it's expected about 70 per cent of the room units in operation by the end of 1956 will burn gas. Norris said homeowners are attracted not only by the low cost of installation and fuel savings that result from concentrating heat where needed, but also by the fact that gas room heaters now are available with thermostatic controls.

THINGS TO COME—You can give someone a bear steak for Christmas through a new shopping service. . . . Plastic slip covers for bar stools have ads printed to show through. . . . A heater for your outdoor motor is only three inches in diameter. . . . Do-it-yourselfers can get a chemical to strip the ends of insulated wires for soldering.

DYNAMIC CREDIT—Figures on extensions and repayment, not totals outstanding at any one moment, are the important factors in installment credit, according to the nation's largest independent purveyor of such credit.

Arthur O. Dietz, president of C.I.T. Financial Corp., said recently that consumer installment debt should never be considered a fixed weight constantly hanging over the heads of much of the population, but a dynamic sum constantly turning over as huge repayments are made every month, and likewise new purchases are made.

"We estimate," he said, "that 8,750,000 buyers terminated their auto contract payments in 1954, and some 10 million in 1955. Almost nine billion of automobile debt has been repaid this year, and overdue payments are now running at a rate lower than any previous normal period."

"Consumer installment credit is the strongest segment of credit."
