Assembluses

(Continued from Page One) own father was a naval of officer who came to Samoa, married a native girl, and settled there. Althought Samoan cannot be drafted, many of them served in the navy during the war. Met in Hawaii utaring the last war. He attended a fashion war. He attended a fashion of the new property owners will be discussed including property control to make the relationship permanent.

The Colemans now have 11 met at the home of John D Haidinger, recording secretary and the campaign.

Assembluses

Assembluses make the relationship permanent.

The Colemans now have 11 children, 10 boys and one girl. Until she became the governor's wife, Mrs. Coleman did her own housework, but now some of the care of the children and house is entrusted to servants. She reported that she likes to do her own housework and says that the children are no trouble.

Native Dress

At the inaugural ball in Washington, Mrs. Coleman said that her dress was probably one of the least expensive, but most discussed. She wore a full-length dress with a black velvet top and red skirt, handpainted with Samoan figures. She also wore jewelry from her homeland.

After a month of the hustle and bustle of the United States, the Colemans report that they will be glad to return to their island paradise where things are freer and easier.

Before leaving, however, the Colemans were homored Saturday at a gathering of some 500 former Samoan residents at EL Camino College. The governor was feted at an royal Samoan "ava" ecremony, performed in honor of visiting dignitiaries.

The festivities, headed by T. David Hannemann of Rendondo Beach, include dancing, singing, and a dinner of Samoan food. The menu featured a pig cooked over hot lava rocks, tuna, crab, lobster, chicken, spareribs, yams, pol, bananas, and pineapple.
