The action taken here stated, "As America becomes increasingly a church-going nation, its religious leaders must avoid the temptation to invoke civil power for the protection of religious institutions. This is completely alien to the American way of life."

Mrs. Young told the church here, "Legal restraints for religious purposes are fatal to the free exercise of religion. They are unfair to religious minorities and to that half of our population not affiliated with any church. In the end the spiritual power of the church will die when it lays hold of civil power to assure its security."
