Progress has a habit of overhauling some of the historic and prominent landmarks of any community and so it was last week when wrecking crews fore down the old Perry School building at 17831 Praile Ave, just 50 years after the tattered and tarnished structure was built as the first school in what is now Torrance.

Complete with bell tower and old-fashioned at raight back chairs and desks, the original perry School is giving way to a new administration building and multi-purpose structure.

The Board of Education first called for bids on the new construction on April 17 and awarded the contract on May 1 to A. H. Dohrman Co.

The old school has stood empty as a testimony to the contrast of time, present and past, for about two years. Up until that time it was used extensively for classroom work and as an auditorium.

In 1954 complete modern units we re constructed and surrounded the building.

Perry School was named after L. J. Perry, who at one time was head o' the Redond Agilway.

Mrs. May Dalton, who first started teaching at Perry 34 and police cars answered the time was head of the Redondo Railway.

Mrs. May Dalton, who first started teaching at Perry 34 years ago, was on hand Thursday and Friday when the workmen began ripping apart the old structure. She still is a teacher at Perry, where she instructs the first grade.

Mrs. Dalton took her first graders out Friday to watch the demolition of the building in which she first began her local teaching career.

She taught the first and second grades when she first went County and city fire units and police cars answered the call and with the help of residents and bystanders battled the flames to a standstill. Damage was limited to a brush section in a gulley just off the fourth fairway.

She taught the first and see and grades when she first went of Perry. She is a graduate of lashington State Normal, in ellingham, Wash, and taught a Washington for four years efore coming to this area in 201

Speaking before newsmen last Friday at a San Ped ri oluncheon, Franklin said: "Mr. King has in the past attempted to fool the voters of our District into thinking that he supports President Eisenhower for better than any Republican ever could. This is a blatant misrepresentation and two key votes by Mr. King prove it.

Officials said the fire was extinguished before any damage was done. It was another in a series of fires that have swept the school during the past year.

A $25,000 fire gutted the administration building of the school in April. Authorities still are looking for the firebug who set that one.
