Reflections

By A. M. HUGHES, JR.
WORDS WE LOVE TO READ:

In spite of automation, electric typewriters and all the marvels of our time the scribbled note is the one we like best.

I can't imagine young people sitting down to a fast typewriter and composing a love letter; that is little more than cold type. A hand-written letter contains a little of the person writing it, each character conveys some small part of the heart, blended in to a message we love to read. There's something intimate in a hand-written letter; it is warm and inviting and the surprising thing to me is that there are as many as there are. My mother once said, "I would rather receive a postal card, written by hand, than a long letter written mechanically."

Rediscover the ancient art of writing personal communications by hand; your correspondent will appreciate it. P.S.—Our services are a personal character exemplified in formal letters.
