Writers Hear David Duncan At Meeting

"Begin with a character in whom you can believe to carry the theme of your story," is the advice of David Duncan, well known novelist, and featured speaker at the October meeting of the S. W. Manuscripters.

When writing historical fiction, he says, steep yourself in the period you have selected. Perhaps much of your research material must be eliminated in your finished work, but your story will give a feeling of reality to the reader. Duncan's latest book, "The Trumpet of God," just published by Doubleday, is based on the Children's Crusade.

Sales Told

Sales reported by Manuscripters at the last meeting include Mark Clifton's, "Reward of Valor" reprinted in the English Science-Fiction magazine, "Authentic," a short item to the New Yorker by Ramonita O'Connor, and an item for "Life in These United States" to Reader's Digest by Edith Battles. "Taming of a Pirate," illustrated article by Polly Booth, appeared in a September issue of Southland Magazine.

Contest Planned

Rules for the Christmas contest were announced by president Mark Clifton. Prizes will be awarded in Adult Fiction, (including plays) Juvenile Fiction, and Non-Fiction; all carrying a Christmas theme. Members in good standing may enter any category in which they have not sold within two years. Manuscripts are to be entered at the November meeting. Prizes will be awarded in December.
