YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"These Two Are Crazy in Love . . ."

Dear Ann Landers: I am the father of a 24-year-old girl. She isn't beautiful but she's healthy-looking and has a nice personality. For the past year she's been working as a bookkeeper in a paper mill and brings home good money.

Seven months ago she offered to pay for the materials to finish off the attic and rent it out to a fellow who is foreman at the mill. It seemed like a good idea at the time because they were just good friends and nothing more. This fellow and I did all the work and it turned out real nice.

Now the two are crazy in love and they spend every minute together. He eats breakfast with us and supper, too. She packs him the same lunch as I get. They kiss in front of everybody who happens to be around. My wife says she didn't act this foolish about the boys she dated in high school.

The trouble is he hasn't paid his rent for three months. My wife lost her temper yesterday and told him to move. He said he loves it at our house and that he couldn't be happy living away from our daughter. Then he cried.

Our daughter is mad at her mother and refuses to speak to her. What shall we do now? —SAD FATHER

Dear Sad Dad: TELL HIM AGAIN. And you might add that since he can't live without your daughter, he should marry her and take her with him.

This fellow has no right to expect free room and board from you. If you let him cry out of this spot you deserve to be rooked.

Dear Ann, I've followed your column for a long time, hoping someone would write to you about a problem similar to mine. So far — no luck, so I decided to write to you myself.

I married a lovely girl 14 months ago. She quite her job to be a "housewife." She keeps busy with girl friends, club meetings, and whatever young brides do. But she simply will not cook.

We get two home-cooked meals a week. One at her mother's house and the other at MY mother's house. The other five nights a week we eat in restaurants or she buys antonese food or pizza pies. I can think of one million excuses for not preparing a meal.

She was brought up on wonderful home-cooking and I love it. When I mention my wife's cooking she gets mad
