"Dancing for Fun and Graceful Living" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Yvonne Boynton, dance instructor, at the meeting of the Torrance Y-Wives, May 21, at 10:30 a.m. She will demonstrate basic target and have the members.

Dear Ann: I'm a widow who was happily married for 36 years. My husband was a won-derful man who had the love derful man who had the love and respect of everyone who knew him. When he passed away two years ago I didn't think life would be worth living. My children and friends have been very kind and the have been very kind and the sun is 'beginning to shine through the clouds.

A very fine widower has taken an interest in me and my friends say he'd propose marriage if I would encourage him a little. I realize I've been distant because of the memory of my husband makes me feel of my husband makes me feel "unfaithful."

My children say I am wrong but how do I get over these feelings?-Not So Merry Wid-

If you had 36 happy years of married life then so did your married life then so did your husband. He's gone now and there's nothing you can do for him. If he was as wonderful as you say, he'd want you to have some happiness in your re-maing years. Life is for the living. If you're interested in the widower let him know it before he gives up.

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experiences of thousands of teenagers if you read ANN LANDERS' new booklet. "How
