

He Wants to be Called 'Pop'!

Dear Ann: I'm a widow 46 but I look younger. I've been going with a man for three years who is wonderful to me and my two daughters. He takes us on lovely trips and sometimes spends week ends and holidays at our home. The girls call him "Pop" and keep get married so he can be with us all the time.

This is the problem. "Pop" can't get a divorce. His wife looks like a dried-up mouse but she has the voice of a hogcaller. I can't understand why he married such a common type. They have four children who all take after their mother.

I've gone to see this woman twice and begged her to di-vorce him. She almost threw me out of the house the last time. She says he's no good and she knows it, but she'll never let him go. Where is her pride? What can I do? Please give me some advice.—Vivian.

Where is her pride? She probably swallowed it long ago in an effort to prevent her children from becoming victins of a broken home.

And speaking of pride — where is yours? What kind of woman permits a man to share her bed and board, without the benefit of clergy—under the noses of her daughters?

If this man enjoys he in g

If this man enjoys being called "Pop," why doesn't he go home and give his own children the love and attention which they are probably starved?

This whole arrangement is This whole arrangement is fimmoral and indecent. You both sound like a pair of beauts. My advice is to send this guy back to his wife on a full-time basis and look for a man who can offer you respectability and marriage.

Dear Ann: I'm a senior in high school and will graduate in June. I'm in love with a fellow 20. He wants to marry me. We've gone together for over a year and get along swell. My mother says he's a nice guy but "not the one for me."

When I told her I wanted to get married she almost had a fit. She wants me to go to col-

fit. She wants me to go to col-lege and run around for a few more years. I keep telling her I should be free to choose my own husband. In our state I am old enough to get married (Continued on Page 22)
