YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

"Use the Rocks To Stop Holes"

Ann Landers. You have culled the pages of a fine newspaper with your evil mind. What do you mean by referring to the birth of a child as an "unfortunate event"?

I refer to the answer you gave the woman who wanted to know if she should attend a shower for the girl who was about to have her second child out of wedlock. You said it was an "unconventional situation" and a girl should not be feted for making the same mistake twice.

I don't know where YOU'VE been all your life, but if you're going to give advice it's time you got the corn-silk out of your hair. This sort of thing goes on all the time and often in the best of families. So, it's NOT unconventional at all, it's a very common thing. And shame on you for being so narrow minded.—Nailed You This Time.

Sorry, Ann, I don't feel a thing in our society a child born out of wedlock is "unconventional." The frequency with which it occurs does not make it ginger-peachy, and this goes for the "BETTER" families, too — whatever that means.

An unmarried girl who brings a child into the world is to be pitied. And if you want to have your own marriage event, then I suggest you use the rocks in your head to stop up the holes.

Dear Ann: Our problem is a neighbor boy who is 9 years old.

He screams at his sister, beats his mother and calls his grandmother a fat pig. This boy is the same age as our own son and he is always coming over to our house and asking for our boy. We don't want our child to play with him because he sets a very bad example.

The parents of this boy speak to me until he can't stand. They've tried everything out on my works. He's stubborn as a mule. He yells nasty things at people who pass the house and nobody likes him. Also, he's terribly overweight and seems to eat constantly. How can we keep this little spoiled brat away from our child?—The Neighbor Boy.

The neighbor's boy is more than just "spoiled." He's a menace on legs.

—Ann Landers

Coralee Schlens Weds Thomas Crail

Baskets of pink carnations, white chrysanthemum and stock flanked by seven-branched candelabra holding white cathedral candles decorated the sanctuary of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Long Beach last Saturday evening for the wedding of Miss Coralee Louise Schlens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Schlens, 125 Via Pasqual, and Thomas Crail, 1914 Crail. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William R. Crail of Long Beach.

Down the bridal path, outlined with pink and white bouquets tied to the gowns, came the bride on the arm of her father. She was lovely in her wedding gown of satin and lace. The gown had a Sabrina neckline, long fingertip sleeves, a long tulle and bouffant skirt. Her long white veil of Point de France lace is a familiar bride. She carried a shower bouquet of white stephanotis.

Mrs. Ronald Prather, maid of honor, wore pink silk organza and carried a bouquet of white spider chrysanthemums, blue angel tresses and lily.

Misses Marcia Crail, Carol Young, Martha Fox and Mary Tobin, were the bridesmaids. They each wore a gown of the pink organza and carried white spider "mums" plus angel tresses and lily.
