Leads Auto on Wild Excursion

Bertha Zimbel, 54, of 21903 Petroleum Ave., had reason today to wonder about the war of man vs. insects.
 She told Torrance police early Tuesday that she lost control of her auto in downtown Torrance while trying to squash a bug on her windshield. The car:
 1. Climbed the curb on Ingracia Ave. just west of Cravens.
 2. Took out a street light pole.
 3. Rumbled along the lawn and sidewalk for several yards, dropping the lamp pole along the way.
 4. Came to rest in the middle of the street.
 The driver was not injured although the auto sustained considerable damage.
 And the bug was found by investigating officers. It was dead.
