PROTEIN FOODS

Where does your money go? Here's what happens to part of it.

Meat ranks as the No. 1 item in the food budget. Meats claim 25c of the families' food dollar. It holds a sizeable margin over its nearest competitor . . . dairy products . . . which takes 17c.

BEEF and PORK make up the largest part of the total red meat consumed. 41 per cent of the total is beef, and a big 30 per cent of that beef is ground. This emphasizes the popularity of hamburger.

The weatherman brought us a sharp drop in temperature. So we'll all be more inclined to have roasts and stews instead of steaks, chops and burgers. But, on the other hand, you'll note steaks continuing down in price . . . brought on by the cooler weather decreasing demand for quick-cooking cuts.

So . . . it'll be BEEF STEAKS, ROASTS, and GROUND BEEF.

PORK at its best and plentiful right now. Try a BOSTON BUTT, SMOKED PICNICS continue to appeal if you are watching the budget . . . and who isn't?

CHICKENS and TURKEYS LAMB supplies and prices are "steady." Good quality and in general distribution. VEAL . . . scarce. POTATO FLAKES. Consumers like 'em. More than four million bushels of this fall's crop of potatoes will be converted into flakes. This is the dehydrated mashed potato product developed through research by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. To make these popular flakes, fresh mashed potatoes are applied to the surface of a heated drum. There they are dried in a few seconds and removed in a parchment-like sheet which is broken into flakes and then packaged. The consumer quickly converts the flakes back into fluffy mashed potatoes by simply adding hot water and/or milk . . . and butter and salt to taste. The result equals fresh potatoes in both taste and texture.
