Capacity Audiences See Hampton Players Offering

Hampton Players' production of "Inherit the Wind" opened to the largest opening week end audience since the group moved into its new theater early this year. Friday night's large enthusiastic audience included many new faces to local theater and Saturday night's sold-out crowd presented the same story. As the plays moves into its fifth week end this week, some evenings are sold out already.

Basing their play on the famous Scopes trial of the mid-Twenties, authors Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee have come up with a modern classic that proved to be a long run vehicle for Paul Muni and Ed Begley on Broadway. In the local production Dick Pinner and Carl Rogers tackle these two difficult leading roles and have received critical acclaim with . . . two academy award performances . . .

14,800 Parents At Conference

Nearly 14,800 parents turned out for group conferences of all 28 of Torrance's schools during the past few weeks, according to a report received by the Board of Education.

At the meetings, parents learn about various parts of the school program and get a chance to ask questions about the general operation of the local educational system. Attendance this year was more than 2000 higher than last year.

Each child's progress will be discussed individually with parents at conferences scheduled in schools after the first report cards are sent out. Some schools already have begun the parent-teacher conferences, while others are slated to begin soon.
