WITHOUT A HITCH!... Four-ton vault door slides easily into place at Bank of America's new Sepulveda and Hawthorne branch, as Alex Bates demonstrates the ease with which his new invention does the job. Bates, vault expert at the bank, worked nearly three years perfecting the hydraulic ram vault door erector, which saves time and avoid installation accidents. The $297,000 bank building at the intersection of Sepulveda and Hawthorne boulevards is scheduled for completion this month. It is near the Broadway department store.

West Virginia Pulp and Paper To Build New Box Factory Here

Two new corrugated box plants for the container division of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co., one in Torrance and one in Phoenix, will be opened as soon as the necessary production facilities can be installed, L. Frank Thompson, division manager, announced yesterday.

The new plants will bring to 17 the number of box factories Hinde & Dauch Division, the company's container division.

THE TORRANCE plant, at 555 Maple Avenue, will be operating by Jan. 1 of 1960. Thompson said that work on both plants is being expedited in response to the large and growing demand for the company's M-R board, a recently developed moisture resistant corrugated board finding wide acceptance among fruit and produce packers in California and Arizona. M-R board is currently being shipped west from Kansas City.

M-R board is now being used in substantial quantities, and the new plants will have complete facilities to provide the quick service and delivery important to fruit and produce packers.

BOTH PLANTS will also be completely equipped to meet the standard corrugated shipping box requirements of manufacturers in the fast growing industrial communities around Phoenix and in southern California.

The new box plants will augment long established western facilities of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. The company has maintained paper sales headquarters in San Francisco since 1925, and opened a new multiwall bag and grocery bag manufacturing facility in Torrance in June of 1958.

QUARTERS for the Torrance box plant are being constructed adjacent to the multiwall bag plant. The multiwall and grocery bag plant manufacturing Wonderwall and Kraftman bags made of Clupak stretchable paper, another product of West Virginia's aggressive research program, is already operating at near capacity levels in response to bag-user demand.

Thompson said the two new plants are part of an over-all company move toward national distribution of corrugated containers. The 15 Hinde & Dauch plants are now located in Baltimore, Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Eaton, Ohio; Gastonia, N.C.; Gloucester City, N.J.; Hoboken, N.J.; Kansas City, Kansas; Meriden, Conn.; Richmond, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; Sandusky, Ohio, and Watertown, Mass.
