EDITORIALS Day of Many Meanings

Labor Day has many connotations for many people. To those who spell the entire labor movement H-OF-F-A, it may be a day of infam. To Jimmy, it may well mean a challenge to go after more power. To some, it's just a long week end in which to get themselves killed on the highway.

To a vast number of Americans, however, Labor Day has been a notable symbol of Man's effort to make a bet-ter life for himself to enjoy just rewards for the work he does. There were times when it was difficult for man to do this, and the labor movement was the product of those

Today, the labor movement has come to a crisis. Successful in improving the economic lot of its members, it is beginning to push others into the conditions from which it has struggled so long to emerge. Boycotts, organizational strikes, good squads, money hungry labor boses all have case a sinister shadow on what should be a day of proud accounting.

The people of America have supported organized la-bor in its worthy efforts and will continue to do so. But the American people, and this includes a great majority of union members, will not stand idle while corruption takes over and gread threatents the nation's economic and mili-tary security. That is why Congress has been debating a strong but equitable labor bill.

If the labor movement cannot clean its own house — and a few dangerously powerful men have made that al-most impossible— then the public will make it possible. May this Labor Day mark the beginning of a new era in the union movement—an era of progress, of self-disci-pline, of dedicated public interest—an era in which the working men and women can maintain with pride and dig-nity their vital role in our national life.

up against it. That agency usually writes the rules, enforces them, acts as judge and jury. Take the example of the electric utility companies in the hearing before the Federal Power Commission on their battle to charge certain advertising expenses as a cost of production for purposes of fixing consumer rates. An FPC examiner ruled that the only point of contro-correction whether the money was ensut for advertising for Dealers in Smut Send Million Pieces a Year

An FPC examiner rited that the only point of control cersy is whether the money was spent for advertising for discussion of a "political question"—the public versus pri-vate power debate. The FPC upheld him and has ruled that testimony is not admissable which attempts to prove that the expenditures were "ordinary, necessary, just and reaso-nable." nable

The largest singlet producer of electric power is the government against which these privately-controlled com-panies must compete. It seems to us that Congress is going to have to declare sooner or later that the electric companies can talk about their competitors in or out of advertising Congress' failure to do so will imply that criticism of a government agency is against the law. Using first class postage which protects the mail from inspection, filth peddlers send out lewd circulars by the hundreds of thousands, soliciting orders from young-sters for obscene movies, photographs, comic books, slides and similar material.

"It is shocking to realize," Mrs. Coner said, "that sales of such trash amount to half a billion dollars a year, by Post Offices estimates."

In a recent speech, she noted, Postmaster General Summerfield stated that police records and sociological studies show that a link exists between addicition to pornography and the increas-ing rate of sex crime.
