Ryan Firebees to Operate With Navy in Far East

Ryan Firebee operations are being extended into the Western Pacific with establishment of a base at Naha, Okinawa, it was announced this week.

Personnel of Navy Utility Squadron 5 (VU-5) at Atsugi, Japan, form a detachment at Okinawa for operation of KDA-4 type Firebees shipped to Naha from the United States under cognizance of headquarters of Utility Wing, Pacific Fleet, at Brown Field, near San Diego.

A P2V Neptune bomber has been transferred from Brown Field to Okinawa to serve as the "mother plane" for the Firebees, which will be air-launched and remotely controlled from the Neptune.

Thus, for the first time, free-flying jet targets will be provided Navy and Marine units in the Far East for air-to-air target practice in sharpening defense capabilities.

This will be the second overseas base for the Torrance made Firebees. Another Navy unit recently was established at Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, to operate with the Atlantic Fleets
