

Spokesman for Water Plan Gives Outline of Proposition 1 Issue

By JAY JORDAN

Proposition 1 on the November ballot — the state water bond act — appears to be one of the least understood measures to confront voters in recent years. Strangely enough, it's also one of the simplest.

In a nutshell, Proposition 1 is a financing device. It would permit the state to sell up to $1 1/2 billion in bonds over a long period to build the Feather River Project and some other smaller projects. It's important to note here that before any of these bonds could be sold, the state would have to make sure that they would be repaid by users of project services, and not by the general taxpayers.

IN ITS major provisions the water bond act generally defines the projects to be built, leaving engineering details to future judgment. It makes money available for local water projects, most of which will be built in the north. The act reaffirms present state laws which protect existing water rights and the future needs of areas from which water will be exported.

Although this all seems uncomplicated, Proposition 1 has generated a surprising amount of controversy and confusion. A lot of this, perhaps most of it, is the result of highly-publicized arguments over points that aren't even in the water bond act — engineering details, pricing policies, contract terms, and many other phases of water development policy which can be determined later. The authors of the act say these matters should be taken up only after the state has the money to build the projects. Otherwise it's a waste of time.

ON THE OTHER hand, not all opposition to Proposition 1 stems from such irrelevant matters. A lot of it goes back to the fact that the water bond act is a collection of compromises. It had to be to win two-thirds approval of the legislature, which has studied and debated the problem for more than 10 years. The act wasn't written to completely satisfy any one group or area. Therefore, nearly everybody can find some fault with it.

Harvey Banks, director of the State Department of Water Resources, sums up the pros and cons of Proposition 1 this way:

THIS IS NOT a perfect act from any one standpoint and it was not intended to solve all of our complex water problems.

WATER PLAN MAPS . . .
Two views of the proposed California Water Plan as outlined in the State's proposal and to be financed by bonds offered to the voters for approval in Proposition 1 next Tuesday indicate the extensive project which is envisioned to bring water from northern part of California to the Southern California area. Governor Brown told local newsmen last week that engineering and feasibility reports supported the State's contention that the bonds proposed in Proposition 1 would deliver water to Southern California.

BOB HOPE SAYS...

KEEP CALIFORNIA GREEN!

California's open land and recreation facilities are among her most priceless assets . . . the backbone of her tourist industry which brings $1 billion a year of outside money into the state and creates thousands of jobs. By clarifying assessment and assuring fair taxation of recreation areas, PROPOSITION 6 will keep California beautiful, reduce smog, preserve facilities for the health and enjoyment of her people.

Next Week's School Menus

Main dishes in Torrance school cafeterias next week (Nov. 7-11) will include baked beef hash, pizza, meat loaf, and a "garden special," according to Supervisor John F. Blandy.

Meals, including milk, may be purchased in elementary school cafeterias for 30 cents. Ice cream bars cost six cents extra, while single bottles of milk are four cents. Next week's menu includes only four days, since Friday, Nov. 11, is a holiday for all schools. On the menu are:

MONDAY—baked beef hash, apple and cabbage salad with marshmallows, pears, peanut butter and honey sandwiches, and milk.

TUESDAY—pizza with beef and cheese, green beans, jellied grapefruit salad, fresh apple sections, hot French bread, and milk.

WEDNESDAY—meat loaf and parsley potatoes, pineapple slaw, sliced peaches, bread, butter, and milk.

THURSDAY—garden special, tomato and cucumber slices, refrigerator cookie, baked custard with cherry sauce, bread, butter, and milk.

FRIDAY—vacation.
