The course will be conduct-ed in two sessions. Each session will be presented twice desire

"In the study are several patients who had had as much as six years of previous analytic therapy with small benefit, and who, after 20 to 40 LSD sessions, either were discharged as markedly improved or appeared to be well on their way to the resolution of their basic problems."

THEY ALSO SAID "because initial therapeutic gains can occur in a dramatic manner and, after a shorter period than is the case with psychotherapy in general, some patients have sought treatment and benefited who would never and benefited who would never have accepted the long-term schedule required in psychoanalytic or most other forms of psychotherapy." The 110 patients studied included psychoneurotics and those with personality disorders, trait disturbances, and other problems, such as addiction to alcohol and/or narcotics. There were 62 men and women ranging in age from 48 women ranging in age from 15 to 62.

A TOTAL of 88 showed improvement ranging from "slight" to "outstanding" after an average of six sessions with an average of six sessions wat LSD. The group that showed the most progress were the manic - depressives, those who are alternately highly elated and deeply depressed. "An encouraging result is the promising progress of those with addictions. Most of these patients were alcoholic problems, but seven of these also had a recent history of drug addiction. The fact that this group did as well as it did suggests the possibility that group did as well as it did suggests the possibility that LSD-25 may be a valuable therapeutic aid in work with this most difficult group."

DRS. CHANDLER and Hartman said the drug produces visual illusions, but these could not be properly defined as hallucinations. "The most obvious difference between the imagery and fantasy which occurs with LSD-25 and hallucination is the factor of insight," they said. "Under LSD-25 the patients know that they are
