Business Activity Continues on Upswing in July, Survey Shows

Southern California business activity continued on the upswing and moved into the year's second half by establishing a record high in July, J.J. Weigel, manager of Security First National Bank's Torrance branch, reported today.

According to Weigel, the new high marked the seventh consecutive month in which the level of business activity has advanced. Security's business index for the month of July stood at 226.2 per cent (preliminary), up slightly over June's figure and 5.4 per cent above the similar period of a year ago.

Based on seasonally adjusted figures, unemployment in the Los Angeles Metropolitan area increased, while in the San Diego and San Bernardino-Riverside areas unemployment decreased. Unemployment in most areas remains higher than a year ago.

DEPARTMENT store sales in the 14 Southland counties displayed marked improvement during July. The seasonally adjusted preliminary sales figures for both Los Angeles and Southern California indicate that July may equal or surpass the previous all-time highs for these two areas.

Total construction in Southern California, despite a moderate decline between June and July, seems headed for its 11th consecutive record year. The bank's report noted that activity during the first seven months of 1961 has been running about 2 per cent above that of last year.

After a sluggish start, residential construction has registered notable improvement in recent months. On the basis of the first seven months' performance, expectations are that that the year will see about 135,000 dwelling units constructed, an increase of about 3 per cent over a year ago.

IN THE Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan area, contrary to the usual seasonal pattern, a small increase was reported. On the other hand, in the San Bernardino-Riverside area and in San Diego County, employment declined moderately.

Shrub or Tree? Some Plants Can Be Both Says Nurserymen's Group

Certain shrubs in almost every older garden have outgrown their shrubby character to become small trees. And the change is not at all unwelcome, for some of these obstreperous numbers are most attractive in their new roles.

Certain of the pittosporums, make excellent small trees. Likewise do strawberry trees and our old friend escallonia. They are especially suited to growing up against a house, since their moderate size is never overpowering and, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen, their root systems seldom cause trouble with foundations and walks.

IN THE pittosporum family, victoriana box is a favorite, being of an open, airy habit with glossy green foliage and waxy spring flowers that dispense the most heavenly fragrance. These flowers give way to small round seed pods which burst in fall.

The lesser known strawberry tree, a relative to the beautiful madrone of our foothills, earns its name because of the somewhat strawberry-like shaped fruit it bears in late summer and fall. They are green to yellow and bright orange-red depending on their maturity. Like madrone, the strawberry tree's trunk is a lovely reddish color when the bark peels back to reveal it. As either a shrub or tree, it is extremely attractive.

ESCALLONIAS are most often thought of as medium to large shrubs, but white escallonia will definitely grow to small-tree size and rather rapidly at that. Its late summer mass of flowers is one of the big attractions, but it is the tree without flowers which you live with most of the year. And a good tree it is, forming a light, overhead canopy that never gets out of hand and needs little attention once it matures.

As with all of these shrub-trees, you can hasten the ultimate form by pruning out the lower branches from the start. Conversely, you can keep them down by pruning out the tops — so take your pick.

Local Men Retire from Air Force

Air Force Commendation medals were presented to Col. Raymond E. Hogan and Col. Leonard T. Coupland, USAF, on their retirement from the Air Force in separate ceremonies July 31. The two men retired after more than 20 years in the Air Force.

Col. Hogan, retiring from the Space Systems division in Los Angeles, was presented his medal and certificate of retirement by Gen. O. J. Rittland, commanding officer of the Space Systems division.

Coupland received his awards from the commander of the Ballistic Systems division, Mr. Gen. T. P. Gerrity.

HOGAN is a 20-year veteran of the Air Force. He has held several staff positions since his entrance in the Air Force. Previous to his retirement, he was deputy director of the Subsystems Directorate of the Ballistic Missiles center. He retired from a post as director of production.
