Two Score Charter Amendments Already Proposed for 1962 Vote

By VINCENT THOMAS

Assemblyman, 68th District
Whether to amend our California State Constitution for the umpteenth time is a question regularly put before the voters. Every General Election as far back as the memory of senior Legislators will go has seen several proposed amendments to this basic document put on the ballot. The situation in the 1962 election will be no different — already 20 proposals are scheduled to come up for voter action. There's no limit to the others which can be added at the 1962 budget session.

As a result, our Constitution has grown to be one of the longest, most unwieldy documents of the type in the nation. Since it was last completely revised in 1879, its length has been approximately doubled by amendment, despite the cutting out of some 20,000 obsolete words. An unofficial score-card shows that 654 changes have been proposed since the revision, of which 347 have been adopted.

Another revision of the Constitution has been suggested many times, but legislation for the purpose has not resulted in any action. Closest to success was a proposal approved by the voters in 1933, but the time allowed for action elapsed with nothing done. A possible remedy for this deadlock may lie in a proposal which will go on next year's general election ballot. It would permit the Legislature to adopt by a two-thirds vote and submit to the voters a revision of the Constitution, in addition to its present authority to submit proposed amendments.

Most popular topic among the amendments to be submitted is assessment of property for purposes of local taxation. Seven proposals relate to this subject. One of them, which I have previously discussed in this column, relates to the assessment of land used for farm purposes.

TWO WOULD affect the veterans' $1000 tax exemption privilege. One would limit it to veterans inducted into service as California residents, but would continue its availability to all eligible for it at the time the amendment is approved. The second would extend to an eligible veteran who occupies a single family dwelling owned by a non-profit cooperative.

Other measures in this group would remove the present 100 acre limitation on the amount of land owned by a non-profit college which is exempt from local taxation, and would extend the exemption for non-profit charitable organizations to property leased, as well as owned by them. Another would limit the valuation assessment made on historical landmarks to their value as such, not for other purposes.

ONE PROPOSED amendment calls for voter approval of a $100 million bond issue, the proceeds to be used to build low-rent housing for eligible elderly persons. Another would provide that in the future, all state bond measures shall be submitted to the voters as statutes, not as constitutional amendments, to avoid adding more language to the Constitution for every bond issue. Still another would create a general obligation bond fund in the State Treasury, into which would be paid proceeds of all bond sales.

The remainder of the 20 amendments cover such diverse matters as alcoholic beverage control, salaries of local officials, workmen's compensation for deceased state employees, boxing and wrestling, and tidelands. One would restore a 10-day recess for regular legislative sessions, and would shorten the time before hearings on bills could begin, but not the time required before final action.

Voters can look forward to a long ballot in November 1962. There will even be a bill to extend daylight saving for them to vote on.

Reserve AF Officer to Head Group

Lt. Col. John I. Bainer, 2615 Lesserman St., has been named director of material for the 8648th Air Force Reserve Recovery Group, according to announcement by Col. Claude J. Norton, commander of the new unit. The unit is based at Long Beach Municipal Airport.

Col. Bainer, employed by NorAir Division of the Northrop Aircraft Corp. in Hawthorne in civilian life, has long been active in the Air Force Reserve in Southern California.

He is a former commander of the 9355th Air Force Reserve Squadron and a former staff member of the 9078th Air Reserve Group.

Bainer is also a former commander of the First Reserve Squadron, Air Force Assn., in Long Beach.

The Recovery groups are new concept in Air Defense. They are designed to provide a haven for aircraft returning from missions which are unable to land at their home bases. All units are based at civilian airports.

Northrop Declares Quarterly Dividend

The board of directors of Northrop Corp. met this week and declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share, payable Sept. 16, 1961 to shareholders of record Sept. 1, 1961.
