Navy Now Accepting ROC Program Applications

Lt. Cmdr. Christy J. Petrofanis, Commanding Officer of the U.S. Naval Reserve Training Center located on the Terminal Island Navy Base announces that applications are now being accepted from qualified college students for enrollment in the Reserve Officer Candidate (ROC) Program of the Navy.

This program is unique in that it is not necessary for the student to enlist in the Naval Reserve to be eligible to make application. Instead, if he is enrolled in an accredited college as a full time student, is pursuing a course of study other than one of medicine, dentistry, or theology, or certain allied subjects, and is physically qualified, he may submit his application for the program.

HIS enlistment in the Naval

Reserve will not be required unless he is actually selected for enrollment in the ROC Program, and only then if he still desires to participate as an officer candidate.

Once enrolled, his obligation embraces two eight week periods of Reserve Officer Candidate training, with pay, conducted during summer vacation months at the Newport, Rhode Island Naval Station. First class round trip travel, usually by commercial air lines, is paid for by the Navy. The remaining months of the year he will associate himself with a Naval Reserve Unit or Ship nearest his college address.

SUCCESSFUL completion of both periods of Officer Candidate training and eventual receipt of the baccalaureate degree will qualify the candidate for appointment to the commissioned grade of Ensign, U.S. Naval Reserve. Enrollment and acceptance into the ROC Program will automatically permit the qualified young man time to complete his college education without interruption of active military service even in the event of an extensive National Emergency call.

Lt. Cmdr. Petrofanis urges all interested students desiring more detailed information to get in touch with the ROC Information Officer attached to his staff at the Reserve Training Center. Students may enter the Naval Base on Terminal Island at Gate No. 1. The Training Center, Building 575, is located on the Reeves Field portion of the Naval Base.
