Teacher Continues Her Work From Wheelchair

"I miss her," she declared, and Charles, who had to be away much of the time on business, ceased to argue about it. Mana's speech did not become affected until the very last, and she was able to instruct her pupils so clearly that they could follow the steps. She presented her pupils in delightfully original programs, and worked individually with those who showed special talent.

THE ELDER Ahles and Mrs. Houskova passed away quietly, like ebbing waves that slip back into the sea at sunset. And like a buoyant new wave rushing shoreward, young 'Lise Ahle grew into a graceful dancer under her mother's tutelage — and so like her mother in her teens that often felt herself swept back through the years.

"Mana and I always shared everything without question, so we enjoyed bringing up 'Lise together," said Maestro Elyse. "We shared ideas, too. I remember when she helped me plan the first May festival, fourteen years ago. We worked it out together, the plan to showcase talent in this area of all types — musicians, singers, composers, artists and painters, sculptors, dancers, actors — and at the same time bring them the inspiration of the greatest professional talent we could obtain. These festivals have become famous now, but Mana deserves as much credit for that as I do."

"WE CARRIED out a similar idea in developing the Christmas Pantomimes, which are designed as happy shows for the whole family to enjoy, with local children participating together with great artists." Mana attended as many of these affairs as she could. Yet slowly but steadily, multiple sclerosis debilitated the nerves and body — although not the morale — of the dancing teacher. During her last ten years, Mana was unable to get herself in and out of bed or chair, or even to turn herself in bed.

Elyse had a buzzer installed between the two bedrooms, and often got up at night to assist Mana.

BUT MS does not kill — it only disables and weakens. It was jaundice that proved fatal to Mana two years ago.

"I miss her," Elyse Ahle, looking out the picture window at the sunset and the sea, "I still do my work here in the dining room, where Mana used to sit with me — in that big chair, right there. Many times I still feel her quiet, cheerful companionship, and hear her tactful advice."

The big house is empty now, except for dear memories, and except when a visit from young Lise, now Mrs. Robert Schoebinger of Redondo Beach, and her two children bring it to life. Cinda Ann is a graceful, pretty blonde four-year-old, and Bobby a handsome, sturdy one-and-one-half years. They scamper across the tiles and among the oleanders, and the smile on Maestro Elyse's face becomes radiantly tender. She is teaching Cindy Ann to play the piano, above which hangs a portrait of the little girl's mother, now a comfortable young matron, when she was a slender dancer in her teens.

ON TOP of music scores and programs that crowd the dining table desk, are multiple sclerosis folders and file cards of MS Marchers Maestro Elyse has recruited for the drive, that continues through Sept. 14.

"Mana contributed her part to MS research, cooperating with medical researchers in testing new theories," said MS March community chairman Elyse Ahle. "She used to say sometimes, 'I'm just a human pincushion. Lyse! But anything that will help save the next generation and the next from the threat of multiple sclerosis, is a privilege to do!'"

"I hope other people, well people, will feel that way, when our MS Marchers call on them," said Maestro Elyse.

WATER SAFETY TIP

Never swim alone—always with a companion.

Garden Checklist

1. Winter sweet pea seeds should go in the ground without delay. You want them full grown before winter arrives.
2. The earliest of our sasanqua camellias will be showing color during the next few weeks. Shop for them in nurseries.
3. September feeding keeps many plants blooming on into fall. Roses are the prime examples. Lawns may also be fed.
4. Plan iris this month; the earlier the better.
5. Camellias tend to set too many buds. Thinning them now, before they develop further will guide all the plant's energies into the buds that are left and result in longer blooms.
