"Now Forget It and Quit Nagging"

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a fellow 22 who is engaged to marry a girl 24. She admitted to one serious love affair before me, but refuses to say who the fellow is. She has gone with several attractive guys but only one was a real sweetheart.

If we are going to have a good life together I think I should know all about her past. And I mean ALL. It's torture when we meet some of her old crowd and I find myself wondering "Is HE the guy?"

I've told her all about my past affairs and I've held nothing back — including names and places. Isn't she being unfair? — FRANK

Dear Big Mouth: Just because you came up with the names and numbers of all of the players doesn't mean that your fiancé should do the same.

She has confessed that there was someone before you — now forget it and quit nagging her for details.

If the fact you aren't getting a white-flower girl is too much to bear then tell her goodbye. I suspect you are too young for her in more ways than one. Find yourself a gal about 18 and maybe you'll be less tortured.

Dear Ann Landers: My aunt and uncle moved to this city three months ago. They are decent people but putting it bluntly, they are ignorant and boring. I can tolerate them alone but I hate to inflict them on our friends.

Last night this aunt and uncle dropped in—uninvited. I was just about to prepare snacks for a small group of invited friends. I sat on needles and pins for a solid hour and then I decided to be frank. I explained that our guests were expected soon and I had to excuse myself to prepare for them. They left with a hurt look.

My husband says I should have asked them to stay. My aunt and uncle spoiled two other evenings for us by dropping in unexpectedly when guests were already present. I decided not to let it happen again.

My husband is annoyed with me. Who is right?—C.X.
Dear C.X.: Your husband will probably be annoyed with me, too, because I have no
