"How Does a Pill Know What to Do?"

Dear Ann Landers: I am eight years of age. Some things worry me a lot because I can't figure out the answer. You answer people all kinds of things every day so maybe you can answer me this one.

My mother takes different kinds of pills for different things. The white pills are for her headaches. The green pills are for her nerves. The red pills are to help her blood.

How does a pill know what is supposed to do once it gets inside a person? How come the pills don't get mixed up? I asked my father about this and he said the older I get the dumber my questions are. I think he just doesn't know the answer. Can you help me? — BILLY

Dear Billy: A pill doesn't have a brain so it doesn't know what it is supposed to do. But a lot of things happen which have nothing to do with brains and here is another example.

Water turns to ice when the air is very cold because it is a law of nature.

Pills do their work according to the laws of nature, too. Doctors know what certain pills will do inside the human body because the pills have been tested in laboratories. So pills don't have to know anything, Billy — just the doctors.

Dear Ann Landers: I am pregnant and must go to a physician soon. This is creating a real problem in our marriage.

My husband wants me to go to his brother-in-law who is an obstetrician because it won't cost us anything. I don't like this brother-in-law and the thought of having him as my O.B. makes me nauseated.

I tried to explain my feelings but my husband says I should grow up. Furthermore, he points out that if I go to another O.B. it may suggest that I have no confidence in J and it could hurt his practice. So what am I to do? — P. G. HEADACHE

Dear Headache: A relaxed and comfortable relationship between you and your obstetrician is far more important than the money you can save by going to a relative.

Tell your husband you'll save on something else and insist on selecting the physician you want.

Dear Ann Landers: I just finished the letter signed, "Old School." The mother was worried about how her daughter was going to run a home when she doesn't even know how to fry an egg.

Well, tell the mother she doesn't need to worry. If her daughter is going to college she can probably read. If she can read she can cook.

The day we married my wife couldn't make a pot of coffee. She bought herself some cook books and made up her mind she'd learn. Believe it or not, inside of five months she was cooking rings around my mother who was one of the best.

This proves that all a girl needs is normal intelligence and the desire to learn. Of course it's better if she has had some experience, but it's not essential. The best cooks tell me they learned on their own and not from their mothers — CORNING, N.Y.
