18-year-old girl and very worried. Maybe there's something wrong with me. Kissing bores me.

I've gone with some awfully handsome fellows and the thought of being kissed is thrilling. But then when it actually happens, it's a real let-down. In fact, I would rather THINK about being kissed than kiss.

Do I sound like some kind of a nut? I haven't told this to anyone because I'm afraid they will think I'm a weird). The first kissing I ever saw was in the movies when I was about eight years old and nothing in real life has measured up to it since. Please tell me if you think I need a head-doctor. — COLD LIPS.

Dear Cold Lips: Anticipation is sometimes more exquisite than realization — especially if the build up has been a particularly glamorous one.

ous one. Your childhood fantasies your chindood rantastes patterned after the movies were probably so exciting that no real-life guy could possibly live up to the dream version.

If, in the next year, you are still bored with your boy friends' expressions of affec-tion, it may be wise to see a "head-doctor" and seek to conquer the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: You must be an iron - hearted, unfeeling woman. You show no sympathy for unhappy wives whose selfish husbands wives whose selfish husbands don't bother to remember birthdays or anniversaries.

My husband was always too wrapped up in himself to give me a thought on these special days. It used to hurt me terribly because my sisters never failed to phone and ask what Henry sent. I'd have to ake up some lie to save my face.

A few years ago I got smart. I ordered myself a beautiful bouquet of roses and I even told the florist and I even told the florist what to put on the card. Now every birthday and anniversary I'm assured of being remembered by "Henry." Isn't this sad? Please print your answer. FORGOTTEN WIFE Dear Forgotten: Yes, it's said all right, that any woman would attach so much importance to what her sisters think that she would buy flowers for herself and pass them off as a gift from her husband. husband.

Gifts are a lovely gesture and nothing more. If you wives think I'm deserting the ranks, allow me to remind you that an awful lot of gift-giving is merely salve to ease a guilty conscience. (Continued on Page 10)

Other new officers installed to serve with Mrs. Sprout were: Mrs. James Wass, first vice president; Mrs. Charles Brennen, second vice president; Mrs. Sam Martin, secretary; Mrs. John Spaan, treasurer.

Decorations at the main

Decorations at the main table featured a beautiful large spray centerpiece of red gladoli and white chrysanthegladoli and white chrysanthemums. Small red fire helmets mounted on invisible wire were arranged artfully amid the flowers. Two toy fire engines, complete with miniature firemen and hoses, were placed one on either side of the centerpiece, making a most unique arrangement. Red and white placecards in the form of small cardboard fire plugs completed the color scheme. The decorations were done by Mrs. Ronald Power. Mrs. Charles Brennen and Mrs. John Spaan assisted.
