TV CANDIDS by Terrence O'Flaherty

Reports of the current hearing before the Federal Communications Commission must be read between the lines to make any sense. The most recent investigation has been aimed at the reasons sponsors reject certain shows as vehicles to sell their products.

The witness who was most specific was the general advertising manager of one of the top five spenders in the television market. His firm bans the following things: "Sex, suggestive dialogue, excessive passion and profanity, material offensive to minority, political, or college groups, unions, and other organizations in good standing in the community, as well as material offensive to well-organized sectional feelings or traditions, also the mention and use of intoxicants."

This is all very altruistic, but after they've eliminated all these undesirable, there isn't anything left but violence. You will notice that there is no reference to it on the list. This may be the best reason yet put forward why we have so much of it. Violence doesn't offend any minorities!

And what do they mean by "material offensive to college groups?" Everyone knows that it's practically impossible to offend a college man!

Jay Ward, the producer of "The Bullwinkle Show," has been turning out publicity material that is irresistible. His latest offering is a "Sing Along With Bullwinkle" Song Book that is full of such delights as "The Clan Song" by George Atkins (sung to the tune of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart").

"What's with Peter Lawford
Have you called today?
Sammy says that Joey's packed
And Shirley's on her way;
Dino sits there waiting
Frankie hasn't got all day.
So where's that invitation tooooo
The White House for a stay?"

The Bullwinkle Oath for television columnists is a lovely idea:

"I, _____, do solemnly swear to watch every episode of the Bullwinkle Show—even during summer re-runs. I will put Jay Ward on my Christmas list and I will never be rude to a moose. I will agitate for Federal aid to middle-aged cartoon producers. I will advocate disarmament on television. When called upon, I will cheerfully bake and sell Bullwinkle cookies and send the proceeds to Jay Ward. And I will poke my eyes out with a sharp stick if ever found watching 'Maverick' or 'Lassie.' So help me General Sarnoff."
