If You Rent Out Garage, Tell Police

Many honest citizens have become unwitting accomplices of auto thieves in the illicit business of vehicle stripping, California Highway Patrol Commissioner Bradford M.

Crittendon said this week. Crittendon said that vehicle stripping, particularly of sports cars, "has been spreading in California." "Many thieves rent private garages in which to conduct stripping operations. As far as the garage owner knows, he has rented out space simply for vehicle storage. Unknowningly, however, he has aided the crime through his failure to report the rental as required by law. "The Vehicle Code provides that anyone (other than a garage keeper) who rents private garage space for storage of a vehicle must, within 24 hours after the vehicle is actually stored there, report such fact to the county sheriff, or to the local police department if the garage is in the city. "This report not only will meet provisions of the law, but will do much to eliminate the method of operation by vehicle strippers."
