next apartment. She is obviously frustrated and lonesome. We've had a few friendly chats and she confided that she was once in love but her life has been sterile and dull since the man moved away and married someone else.

I see pressures building up in this girl and from what little I've read about such things, she's a normal young woman who needs a natural outlet.

You may not believe this, Ann, but my prime concern is to help this girl avoid a nervous breakdown. It is merely coincidental that I'm lonesome and frustrated, too.

Although this may not be strictly according to the rules, the arrangement makes sense to me. Please cut out the kid stuff and give me some adult advice. We are not teenagers.—ED

Dear Ed: Now you're what I call a real humanitarian! It's mighty noble of you to step forward and offer to save this normal young woman from a nervous breakdown by providing her with a "natural outlet."

A backdoor affair with a married man old enough to be her father is not my idea of a solution to any young girl's problem.

If you're so interested in humanity why not see what you can do about that "dead mackerel" you're married to?

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experience of thousands of teenagers if you write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. C 1962, Field Enterprises, Inc.
