Ground Broken for New White Front Store Here

Official ground-breaking ceremonies for the new White Front department store, located at Hawthorne and Torrance boulevards, were held Thursday morning.

White Front officials, headed by general manager Harry Epstein, joined with a civic delegation led by Mayor Albert Isen to turn over the first shovel full of dirt and plant a time capsule. The capsule, which will be uncovered and opened in 20 years, contained newspapers for the date.

CONSTRUCTION will begin at once on the 125,000 square foot department store, with January opening date planned. Parking is being provided for 1,500 cars, and a large supermarket, the first in a White Front store, is to be opened.

Also present at the ground-breaking were Sam Nassi, general merchandising manager of the chain; Mac Gilburn, supervisor; Herb Franklin, advertising manager; and Frank Gladstone, soft goods manager.

CIVIC OFFICIALS in addition to Mayor Isen included Councilman Nickolas Draie; Councilman Ken Miller; Martin Dena, Chamber of Commerce president; and Bobbett King, Miss Torrance.

Epstein told the group that Torrance had always been a desired area "and now with our tremendous expansion program in full swing, we are very happy to break this ground." Epstein turned the first dirt with a gold shovel.

The time capsule will be opened to compare prices and advertising methods in 20 years.

WIN TROPHIES . . . Curt Stetten and Melrose Sawyer, members of the Los Caballeros Youth Band, proudly display the trophies which the band won during the Santa Barbara Fiesta Parade. The group walked off with the sweepstakes award which included $150 cash. The band last appeared in Torrance in the Rancho Days parade. (Herald Photo)

Youth Band Wins Fiesta Sweepstakes

Carson's Spanish costumed Los Caballeros Youth Band walked off with the sweepstakes award during the annual Santa Barbara Fiesta Parade. The group last appeared in Torrance in the Rancho Days parade.

The youngsters share a large state championship trophy and a $150 cash prize went to the band's treasury.

The band, although many of its members are on vacation, has made 25 appearances this year. They have won three sweepstakes awards and five first place awards.

The band will march in the San Gabriel Mission Parade Sept. 1, and on Labor Day will play a concert at Swiss Park in Duarte for the Self-Aid Workshop.

My paper has reported me "ill" the last two days. I guess they were embarrassed to say I had been bitten by a squirrel. It took a bite to show me the difference between medicine on television and in real life.

It happened on a little plot of swamp land that I bought during an extremely low tide.

At high tide I discovered it is mostly under water. The rest of it is covered with poison oak and a mortgage.

It is inhabited by gophers, ducks and squirrels and something that groans in the middle of the night.

The other afternoon I picked up a playful gray squirrel by the tail and he bit me. I do not blame him at all. If anyone picked me up by the tail, I would bite too.

That is one of the morals of this story.

Harry, my neighbor, sent me right off to the local hospital. I've never been in a hospital before except to leave flowers and run without inhaling too many germs. All I know about them is from TV shows.

Naturally I expected a blonde nurse, fresh out of Hollywood High, with long eyelashes and a degree in psychiatry. The one I got could pin Gorgeous George in one throw.

"Well, what do you expect ME to do about a squirrel bite?" she asked.

"Harry, my neighbor, said you would give me a shot for tetanus or rabies or something."

"WHO is Harry?" she asked.

"He's my neighbor. He knows about squirrels."

She dialed a number on the phone. While waiting for it to answer, she pushed her glasses up over her forehead and fixed me with a look of utter disdain.

"Say doctor, I certainly do hate to bother you, but I have a grown man here who was bitten by a squirrel . . ."

The doctor came down and asked, "Where's the squirrel?"

"Well," I said, "frankly I don't know. I've kind of lost contact with him since we first met."

"We must have the squirrel—dead or alive—to determine if he has rabies. If he has, you're in trouble. Rabies is fatal in human beings. You'll have to take shots which are very dangerous in themselves."

So I went home and Harry shot the squirrel. He looked so little and so still and I felt very sorry for the first time that day. Then I phoned the doctor.

"Say, I've got the squirrel!" I said.

"What squirrel?" he asked.

"How many squirrel cases have you had today? I'm the guy who got bitten. What do I do with it now?"

"Wrap it in wax paper and put it in the icebox. Tomorrow morning take it to the County Health Department for inspection."

"Can't I put it in YOUR icebox?" I asked.

"No, because then WE would have to take it to the County Health Department."

So I wrapped it in Kaiser aluminum foil because it's quilted and I put it next to the frozen spinach. Then I put a note on the outside that said "POISON" because I have a houseguest who will eat anything that isn't marked "Poison."

Then I wrote a note to remind myself, "TAKE SQUIRREL TO HOSPITAL," and went to bed.

The squirrel is now at the County Health Department under observation. I am under observation, too. Time is ticking by.

And I have just remembered with a kind of cold horror that the dear old nurse shouted to me as I escaped her:

"Even if the analysis is negative, how do you know you got the right squirrel?"

People say television should be more like life. In the field of medicine, I say, life should be more like television.
