"Six thousand miles and not a bit of trouble... other than with the wife about when to stop... where to eat and what to see."

Sight & Sound

By Ernest Kreiling

HOLLYWOOD — Flickering TV picture tubes will soon be lighting up America's living room again, and most families will spend five hours a day looking at images prance across a piece of curved glass. Man's preoccupation with images for entertainment and escape is as old as man himself, pre-dating by centuries the movies and television to which we devote much of our time today.

Early cavemen probably entertained themselves by manipulating fascinating shadows on the walls of their caves. In early Chinese civilizations shadow puppets were used to create entertainment in the form of shadow plays. Then came peep shows presented by itinerant entertainers who carried a black box on their backs from village to village to offer people perspective views and dioramic scenes for a small fee.

THE HISTORY of man's perseverance and inventiveness in creating phantasy and re-creating reality through images is authentically and fascinatingly told at the Lytton Center of the Visual Arts on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood. Of equal interest to the scholar and the casually interested, the Lytton Collection of pre-cinema artifacts and devices was described by Arthur Knight, cinema critic of the Saturday Review, as "without doubt the finest of its kind in the world."

Magic lanterns as used in Europe between 1750 and 1900, complete with their unique painted slides ranging in subject from religion to fairy tales to history, are another interesting step in the long history of man's concern with moving images.

IN 1824 Peter Roget (more familiarly associated with the Thesaurus) developed a theory of The Persistence of Vision which simply suggested that the eye retained an image a fraction of a second longer than it actually appeared. This theory is still the basic principle of the movies and television. Ten years later, W. G. Horner invented the Zoetrope, a drum with slits in the sides. When a sequence of drawings were inserted inside the drum and the drum rotated rapidly the drawings sprang into life-like movement.

Various Zietropes — and its more elaborate relative, the

Art Gallery Begins Show In PV Plaza

Expressionist drawings and paintings by Anne Shields and figurative paintings by Violet Moss will be featured in a two-man show beginning today.

The two artists are featured in an exhibition at the Palos Verdes Artist's Co-op Gallery, the show will continue through Sept. 22. The gallery located in Palos Verdes reception for the artists be held at the gallery this morning from 7 to 10. Mrs. Shields, who has been featured in a number of shows, also teaches painting drawing privately. Mrs. Moss, an active member of the gallery, is being seen in her major show.

Praxinoscope — are demonstrated at the Lytton Center.

Of special interest is a 75-foot photo-mural of scenes from hundreds of famous American films from the earliest silents to today's extravaganzas. The mural, edited by Arthur Knight, has more than historic interest, however, it evokes nostalgic memories in most visitors, such as, "Oh, I remember that picture. I saw it with a boy I was engaged to in Buffalo," or "I'll bet the new Mutiny On The Bounty won't be as good as the old one."

THE LYTTON CENTER of Visual Arts is a valuable and colorful contribution to the history of pre-Madison Avenue images. The collection will become a part of the Hollywood Museum when it opens in 1964, but in the meantime is open to public viewing free of charge at 8150 Sunset Blvd.

Man has always sought machines for seeing better, but until television he has never spent so many hours using them. And whether we're seeing better or just more is a moot point.

But there's no reason to doubt that the tenuous marriage of science, business and art will continue to produce more and better machines for enveloping us in images of reality and phantasy.

A copy of an illustrated brochure featuring some of the valuable items in the Lytton Collection is available free of charge by simply addressing a post card to THE HERALD.

New Book Discussion Group Set

Formation of a daytime Great Books Discussion Group for the area was announced by Mrs. Veannette Pierson of Hermosa Beach and Mrs. Ida Moran of Manhattan Beach, who will act as co-leaders.

Meetings will be held in the conference room of the American Savings and Loan Assn., 205 S. Pacific Ave., Redondo Beach, from 10 a.m. to noon on alternate Wednesdays, beginning Sept. 19.

Sixteen selections will be read and discussed during the year, including some Greek classics, a book of the Bible, the Declaration of Independence, and a short novel by Tolstoy.

Mrs. Pierson and Mrs. Moran emphasized that there is no charge for participation in the group. The only requirements are an interest in ideas and a desire to read the great literature of the world. Discussions will follow the procedures developed by the Great Books Foundation, a non-profit foundation for adult education.

For further information call Mrs. Moran at FR 4-6370 or Mrs. Pierson at FR 9-0302.

School Boards Assn. Sets Meet

Regions eight and nine of the California School Board Assn. will hold a joint annual conference at Riverside on Sept. 15.

The day's session will be attended by school board members throughout Southern California.

"Preregistration of students is more important than ever because of rapidly increasing enrollments and possible classroom shortages," Superintendent of Schools Jack P. Crowther reported this week in announcing the Los Angeles City Schools' plans for preregistration of students.

A three-day registration period prior to the opening of school on Sept. 17 will be held for all junior and senior high school students. The sign-ups will be conducted on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 11, 12 and 13, with some schools using Friday, Sept. 14, as a pickup day. Most schools will follow one of these two registration plans:

PLAN A
All pupils who will attend the school will report during the three-day period and will either: (1) Be programmed from scratch; (2) have an established program adjusted as a result of summer school attendance; or (3) merely validate their return to school on Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of the opening week of school.

Pupils scheduled to attend a school which follows Plan A and do not preregister on one of the three days cannot be assured of desired classes and subjects when school opens.

PLAN B
The schools which will follow Plan B will require that only pupils new to the school service area, those who went to summer school, or any other students who wish to do so, must report to school during the three-day preregistration period. Parents or students should call the school which they will be attending to determine which of the two plans the specific school will follow. All junior high schools will follow plan B.

Kiwanians Set Clothing Drive

Members of the Kiwanis Club of Torrance are going ahead with plans for their old clothing and shoe drive as schools near opening day. The drive will donate items that are collected to an orphanage.

Expectant Parents Class Set by Red Cross Here

Expectant parents from the southwestern area who attend Red Cross Mother and Baby Care classes tend to be young, in the professions, and less than three months away from being parents. These results of a survey of the area were announced this week.

The survey, conducted by the Red Cross on students from all communities in the area, drew responses from 128 students over a 12-month period.

During September, the South Bay Branch of the Red Cross will sponsor a Mother and Baby Care course at South Bay Branch headquarters. Classes will begin Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m. The two-hour sessions will be held on Wednesdays and Mondays for seven sessions. Registration may be completed by calling the Red Cross, FR 2-5858.
