Morning Report:
At the United Nations we are going after the Russians hot and heavy and they are reciprocating tooth and nail. If the same sort of insults were traded at the corner bar, the cops would have been called days ago.
I'm not one for saying that the U. N. encourages international troubles. It's just that the proximity of the enemies speeds up the controversy. In the old days it took and affront weeks to cross the ocean by sail.
In the United Nations, modern electronics makes possible the instant insult. The only delay is the time it takes somebody to untie his shoe laces.
