'This-Touchiest Of All Problems . . .

Dear Ann Landers: My sister and I are having a double wedding in three months. We are both marrying local fellows from large families. The problem is I don't want any children at the wedding or the dinner because we can have only a limited number of guests.

My sister say our fiances will be hurt if they can't have their nieces and nephews present. She points out that they are all well behaved. I say children don't belong at an evening wed-ding — well behaved or not.

How do we let the parents know that children are not in-cluded in the invitation? We don't want to start off mar-ried life with our relatives sore at us. Please, Ann, instruct us on how to handle this delicate situation. — CLEVELAND TROUBLES

Dear Cleveland: This is one of the touchiest of all problems and I can tell you right now you're not going to please everybody. A double-wedding automatically kites the guest list by one-third. Your fiances should take this into consideration.

The best solution is to give

The best solution is to give a party for the young children a week or two before the wedding. Make it clear to the mothers that you are entertaining the small fry because you are unable to in. cause you are unable to invite them to the wedding. Have games and favors, a little wedding cake and ice-cream. Make it as festive as possible. This should get you off the hook nicely. off the hook nicely.

Dear Ann: Last night I had dving to go out with for ages. I'm 15 and Dick is an upperclassman.

We doubled with his buddy who has a car. I never cared for his buddy. He takes out girls I consider common. Also he is famous for having flunked geometry three times.

After the movie, instead of going for a hamburger, we headed for a spot called "Petter's Paradise." I told Dick I didn't like the idea but he said the driver of the car has the say.

Right away the two in the front seat started to mush it up. This must have given Dick ideas because till then he had been a perfect gentle-man. I told him to take me straight home or I would get out and walk.

He got mad and told his uddy that "Miss Flat Tire of wanted to go right (Continued on Page 10)
