It has been nearly a decade since I wrote about a New York TV show titled "Leave It to the Girls." Its star was a lady named Maggi McNellis who was bright and talkative-if those two talents are compatible.

During a recent visit to New York I tuned to NBC-TV and there to my surprise was "Leave It to the Girls" with Miss McNellis.

She was wearing one of those terrible wigs that make women look so frowsy. Otherwise she might have been sitting at that same microphone since the fall of

There was a panel of assorted female celebrities including Joan Benny (Jack's daughter), Margaret O'Brien and Rita Hayes. Also on hand were columnist Hy Gardner and a Reader's Digest correspondent named James Stewart-Gordon who had just interviewed a gorilla in Germany.

The other channels offered either old films or Art Linkletter so there wasn't much choice.

Why are women's friendships with women more sincere than a man's friendship with other men?" asked Miss McNellis in a voice so shrill that it almost cracked her eye make-up.

"Women's friendships are more lasting because they see their friends more often," said Miss Benny. "Men's friends are usually poker players or such."

"Yes women are more the true-blue type," said Miss Hayes. "Men are more jealous about their jobs than their friends."

'Why are women such cheap tippers?'

"Women don't know about the proper amount," said Miss O'Brien. "There should be a school for tip-

"Men tend to overtip," said another. "It's a sure indication of social insecurity when you overtip." From now on I'm going to be socially secure and save some

Columnist Gardner asked: "Why do you women start to talk the minute your husband gets home and turns on television to listen to the news?"

"It's the only time we know his ears are really open," answered Miss Hayes. "We know he's ready to listen. He may never hear at any other time."

☆ ☆ ☆ At this point NBC news interrupted to say that the U.S. and Soviet delegates were still wrangling at the U. N.

When we got back to Miss McNellis, she was talking to the man from Reader's Digest who was saying that gorillas make only six sounds, but they understand 20 words-which made them equal to some people I

He said he couldn't really remonstrate this with-out the gorilla and that seemed reasonable enough to me. Then he asked Miss Hayes for a date which was the most sensible thing he said all afternoon.

Before I could take a closer look NBC brought on its U. N. correspondent, Pauline Frederick, to say that the United Nations had adjourned until 6 p.m. and gave a resume of the morning's activities in the General

With that, I had to bid farewell to Miss McNellis and friends and switched to CBS. After all, without a gorilla to interview, her show didn't seem quite right.

The very thing that launched Edie Adams in her world of big-time entertainment has now become her greatest handicap. I am referring to her famous im-personation of Marilyn Monroe. Although Miss Adams is a capable performer, she must fight the fact that her mannerisms-fed for nearly a decade on the Monroe take-off-are still highly reminiscent of the late, mixedup blonde.

Raymond Burr of "Perry Mason" will star in a short medical series of his own this Christmas when he undergoes minor corrective surgery for the removal of a polyp from his stomach. Both Kildare and Casey have offered to do the operation, but so far Burr prefers other specialists. The shows he will miss in the "Perry Mason" series will be shown in January and February of next year.

Fight promoters for the return heavyweight bout between Liston and Patterson are asking $750,000 for the TV rights to the fight, but no sponsor is interested. As an industry spokesman commented: "Who wants to sponsor a one-minute TV show?"
