

'Horse DOESN'T Know Way'--But They Do

'Grandmother's House' In 1962 Still Popular Spot

Over the hill and through the woods" used to be the directions for getting to grandmother's house. But these modern-day grandchildren, 10 of them to be exact, know that it's around a few corners and down a few blocks "to grandmother's house we go." And when holiday time, especially Thanksgiving, rolls around they all head in that direction. Grandmother is Mrs. George Jennings, 2319 W. 247th St., Lomita.

Grandmother has won for herself a reputation as a very good cook and is acclaimed by family, friends and members of the Torrance Rebekah Lodge 347, who seek out her dishes at the lodge's pot luck affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, who came to California in February 1943, from Kansas, are both members of the local Rebekah lodge. Mr. Jennings has been a longshoreman for the past 19 years and is a member of the Odd Fellows 495.

The Jennings have three married daughters, all graduates of Narbonne High school. They are Mrs. Walt Withrow, Mrs. Stewart Cooke, both of Torrance, and Mrs. Paul Pettit of Lomita.

The 10 grandchildren are Dennis, Patricia, and twins Bill and Bob Withrow; Stephen and Douglas Cooke; and Paul, Mark, Cindy and Tim Pettit.

Why the Jennings home is the popular spot on Thanksgiving is proven with the contribution of the following dishes which complement the traditional turkey and dressing dinner. Several of these recipes will appear in the new cook book now being printed by the Rebekah lodge

YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'The Boy Was Disrespectful . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: I've always had a private telephone line until recently. Now I'm on a party line — the other party is the family next door.

They have a 17-year-old son who screams, "Hey, get off the line!" whenever I pick up the receiver. What possible interest could I have in listening to this boy jabber with his high school friends?

After being shouted at and insulted several times I sat down and wrote a letter to the boy's father. I received no reply. If someone had written a similar letter to me I would have been over immediately to discuss the problem.

Now whenever I encounter a member of that family they turn their heads. Do you feel I should not have written the letter? What are your views on parents who take their children's side — right or wrong? — GRAND RAPIDS

Dear Grand: The father should have responded to your letter as a matter of courtesy. (Perhaps, too, you should have discussed the problem face to face with his mother or father.)

Parents do their children no favor when they take their side against adults who have legitimate complaints. This boy was clearly disrespectful.

In most cities the telephone company will change your party line partner if you have a good reason for requesting it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am engaged to a wonderful guy. Carl is very stubborn and he can make white look black if he sets his mind to it.

The other evening he was over for dinner. Several relatives dropped in later and we were all seated in the living room. I looked up and saw Carl reading the newspaper. I gave him the eye but it did no good. He continued to read. Then he started to work the crossword puzzle. His only contribution to the conversation was an occasional sentence, such as, "Do you know a three letter word for rodent?"

When we were alone I told Carl I was appalled at his bad manners. He claims the company didn't come to see him and furthermore he was bored listening to family conversation.

Is he right or wrong? — CELESTE

Dear Celeste: He's wrong. It's insulting to guests to have a newspaper read in one's face. (P.S. Tell him a four-letter word for Carl is r u d e.)

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this letter after being sober for two weeks—which is a long stretch for me. Congratulations are not in order yet — perhaps in two years. But I can't wait two years to let other young housewives know how easy it is to slip merrily down the road to absolute hell.

It started a few years ago. An illness in the family, the inevitable medical bills, worry, quarreling, nervousness — and at last, one drink to help me sleep. Then three drinks at bedtime because
