By Mike Connolly

Dear Mike: What does Debbie Reynolds think of iz Taylor these days? — Lillian McCarthy, Providence, R. I.
Dear Lillian: I really don't know and Debbie isn't saying but I know Debbie stayed over in Las Vegas a day after she closed her own night club act to see Edie Adams' new act—and laughed and laughed and LAUGHED when Edie came on doing an imitation of Liz singing "I'm Just a Girl who Can't Say NO!"

Katherine Gentry, Peoria, Ill.
Dear Katherine: Apparently there aren't enough viewers like you. When the Rogers-Evans ratings went down, the sponsors dropped the Rogers-Evans shows.

Dear Sir: Is there any truth to the fan mag gossip that TV star Eric Fleming has a wife? Who is she? He has been publicized so long as a bachelor—what is one to believe? — Mrs. Eloise H. Stevens, Biggs, Calif.
Dear Mrs. Stevens: One is to believe his secretary. Falling to reach Eric, I reached his Girl Friday, who said, "No, Eric isn't married, unless he (oops!) did something over the weekend!"

You Funny Man, You: Please be serious for once. I'm an orphan girl and was raised by my very strict grandmother. I want to be a movie star more than anything else in the world and have saved $500 in the last two years washing bottles in my uncle's dairy. I now want to come to Hollywood but Granny says she'll die of shame if I go to that sinful town. She says God doesn't dwell in Hollywood. Mike — I don't want to break Granny's heart. What should I do? — Imogene McElroy, Boston, Mass.

Look Here, You: My mother insists that Eva Marie Saint was on a TV soap opera. I say she wasn't. Who's right? — Irma Nielson, Angola, Ind.
Dear Irma: Mother knows best. It was the "One Man's Family" series.

Dear Imogene: I'm always serious. I think your grandmother is too overwrought about your well being. Since you sound more serious than another lady who asked me about "getting by on her good looks," and since your grandmother sounds like a deeply religious woman, you both know that God has no geological boundaries. As a practical solution, I would suggest you go to your pastor or YWCA and find out about the residence homes here in Hollywood that religious groups have for working girls. There are many such places. And I'm certain that your grandmother will change her mind once she finds out for herself that Hollywood isn't too much different from your own home town.

Dear Mike: I am blonde, blue-eyed, have a terrific figure and have won several beauty contests. Even people who think I'm stuck-up have to admit I am good-looking. I will be graduating from high school in June and want to come to Hollywood and try for stardom. I know I can make it but my folks think I should go to junior college and join a little theater group first. I think I'd just be wasting my time doing that and am sure I could get along on my good looks while learning to act. After all, look at Kim Novak (sigh)! What do you think? — Liz Markland, Brattleboro, Vt.

Dear Mike: Is Jetta Goudal, that fabulous siren of the silent screen still alive? — Ben Catena, Walla Walla, Wash.
Dear Ben: Yes, the siren is happily married to decorator Harold Grieve and lives in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dear Liz: Your folks and your drama coach know best. Big stars from little theater groups grow. Witness our two leading Oscar nominees this year: Geraldine Page and Anne Bancroft. As for "getting along on your good looks," that might have been true in Hollywood once upon a time but not any more. You have to be professional to begin with. Buckle down, doll.

(Mike Connolly welcomes all readers' questions, but due to the large volume of mail received, it may be some time before the answer to your question appears in his column.)

Dear Sir: Can you please tell me why such morally and spiritually uplifting shows as those starring Roy Rogers and Dale Evans are replaced on the air by shows that some of us never bother to watch? I think if we had more religious shows we would have less teenage crime and delinquency. God bless Roy and Dale. I've read their books and think they are a grand Christian couple. —
