that's where I am.

I have three older brothers and an older sister. I can't remember ever getting anything to wear that was bought brand new, just for me. My mother always says, "This is too good to throw away. Al can wear it." Even the patches have patches. It isn't only clothes—it's school supplies, books, toys. Just name it and books, toys. Just name it and I've inherited it.

The youngest is the messenger boy and errand-runner. "Go get this... get that. Bring my grey sweater. My purse is upstairs. My skates are in the basement. Go to the store. Walk the dogs."

The last in line gets the dirty work, the hand-medowns, and the neck of the chicken. It's no fun being the baby in the family. It's all work.—END OF THE LINE.
