these high rates of payroll tax-ation for unemployment insur-ance create problems for Cali-fornia employers who compete with those of other states. It cites the fact that present tests of eligibility for benefits may be unrealistic, inadequate and impractical, so that persons not really attached to the labor market are receiving benefits. It directs the Department of Employment to make a more detailed study of the work records and characteristics of benefit claimants, and to esti-mate the fiscal effects of changes in eligibility rules. IN THE announcement of the

IN THE announcement of the IN THE announcement of the Committee program for its in-vestigation, it was indicated that questions to be reviewed would include 1) should em-ployes pay part of the costs; 2) should the state general fund absorb some of the costs; and 3) should employers be given special tax offsets if they provide retraining for dis-
