YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'Child, Not Result Of Early Years . . .'

Dear Readers: Parents often write and ask me what makes some children turn out well and some badly. Why do some youngsters grow up to be responsible, loving, well-adjusted adults while others seem to lose their way?

There are no pat answers to these questions. Heredity is undeniably a factor but there is more and more evidence to support the theory that a child is the net result of what happens to him in his early years.

The following piece came in the mail from a reader. It was signed "Author Unknown," and I would like to share it with you.

If a child lives with criticism he learns to condemn.

If a child lives with hostility he learns to fight.

If a child lives with fear he learns to be apprehensive.

If a child lives with pity he learns to feel sorry for himself.

If a child lives with jealousy he learns to hate.

If a child lives with encouragement he learns to be confident.

If a child lives with praise he learns to be appreciative.

If a child lives with acceptance he learns to love.

If a child lives with approval he learns to like himself.

If a child lives with recognition he learns to have a goal.

If a child lives with fairness he learns justice.

If a child lives with honesty he learns what truth is.

If a child lives with friendliness he learns that the world is a nice place in which to live.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a Navy wife whose husband is on a Polaris submarine riding the sixth patrol. My man is gone for 14 weeks and is home for 10 weeks.

My two children are in school so they don't require much time or attention. I read, sew, clean shop, bowl, swim, watch TV and go to the movies but still I get lonely, especially for male companionship.

It is no secret that some Navy wives run around. Everyone knows who these women are. In some cases their husbands know and are willing to forgive and forget.
